There is nothing more agreeable than being in no way responsible to anybody for anything you do. Next to this in comfort is being responsible only to those who either do not care what you do, or, caring, cannot conveniently call you to account, or are not likely to do so immediately. Any man who can treat himself to either of these luxuries, has the world at his feet, and may turn life into a carnival. A thorough-going despot, after he has been doing something peculiarly out-rageous, always calls attention to the fact that he I columns, constituting an unrivalled galaxy of talent. is responsible to nobody but God and his own conscience, and thus leaves his fellow mortals no sort of pretext for desiring an inspection of his accounts. He does not, of course, pretend to be certain that there will not prove to be a balance against him at the final reckoning; but to a worthy man whom he has robbed or bastinadoed, or an innocent woman whom he has publicly flogged, Also, the most popular writers of the South, and especially many Lady writers of established literary reit would require human nature to be very much more malignant and fanatical than it is for it to find comfort, under an odious tyranny, in looking forward to the confusion of the tyrant at the
