RESOURCES OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA.
The great strength of this section is her agriculture, her rich valleys and surprisingly fertile mountains. It is to be regretted that for the most part the same old system of tillage which our fathers practiced is still retained. In this county and in Henderson are to be found some farms which are beautified with taste and cultivated with skill—farms where the learning and skill of others is used to enrich the owner. And there are throughout the West beds of land which with the ordinary tillage produce marvellously, such is the native fertility of the soil. Upon every mountain stream is found more or less such valley land.
But one matter of wonder to strangers is that our mountains should be fertile to their very tops, and we have heard the warmest expressions of surprise from them on seeing the luxuriant grass which covers the bald spots and is found in some degree all over the mountain. That these rich mountains are of incalculable value for the raising of sheep there cannot be the slightest doubt.
The field for enterprise in this respect is inviting.
Sheep will live where anything else would starve, is an old saying and very near a true one, but where we have no need to put them on barren heathers, as in Scotland, for we have rich mountain tops, sown by nature with grass, whereon they may pasture, and still use no ground easily tilled.
From sheep growing the mind naturally turns to the manufacture of wool. This section is peculiarly adapted to be a great manufacturing region. As yet, however, almost the first decisive action is to be had. The magnificent water powers of Valley and Hiwassee Rivers, Nantahala, Tennessee and Tuckasee, Pigeon, French Broad and Swannanoa, the Catawba and its tributaries, the Caney, the Toes, and the Watoga are all comparatively idle except here and there a grist or saw mill. If the South is to live to herself then she must have manufacturing, and no section can present the advantages—health of location, immense water power and fertile soil to produce grain—which Western North Carolina can.
Then, too, are her mineral resources—by no means small. Iron—the great artery of the world's industry—Copper, Lead, Silver and Gold; an abundance of limestone and the finest of marble. Of all the immense beds of iron ore—one only are any works of consequence operated—the Cranberry in Watauga. We have not the slightest doubt that there are other beds equally as valuable as this, which is said to rank equal to any in the world. The forests are here from which to have the charcoal, the ore is at hand, then why not have the works? It is true there is yet no outlet to the world, but the Railroad is fast approaching Morganton, and the day is at hand, when we can look with entire confidence to its arrival in or near Asheville from three different points.
Copper ore abounds in Jackson and has been developed there. It is to be found in quantities in Yaukey and Madison. Henderson furnishes gold, while an abundance is found in Rutherford, Caldwell, Burke and McDowell. Cherokee also has some gold, but is richer, we think, in lead and silver. There are, too, some small iron works in Cherokee. We have no doubt that near the great limestone lead from McDowell to the Upper French Broad line will bring to light a vein of Silver-bearing lead. Black lead exists in immense quantities but is not sufficiently pure or highly priced to pay transportation at present.—Asheville Advocate.

Douglas on Lincoln.—During the Illinois campaign, Judge Douglas, in one of his speeches, gave the following sketch of his opponent, Mr.
Lincoln, which is amusing, and, in the absence of more authentic information respecting him, will probably serve to enlighten the public as to Mr. L.'s previous history. Mr. Douglas said:
"In the remarks which I have made upon this platform, and the position of Mr. Lincoln upon it, I mean nothing personal, disrespectfully or unkindly to that gentleman. I have known him for nearly twenty-five years. We had many points of sympathy when I first got acquainted with him.
We were both comparatively poor; both struggling with poverty in a strange town for our support—I an humble school teacher in the town of Winchester, and he a flourishing grocery keeper in the town of Salem. [Laughter.] He was more successful in occupation than I, and hence became more fortunate in this world's goods. Mr. Lincoln is one of those peculiar men that has performed with admirable skill in every occupation that he ever attempted. I made as good a school teacher as I could, and when a cabinet maker I made the best bedsteads and tables, and my old boss said I succeeded better in business and secretaries than in any thing else. [Laughter.] But I believe that Mr. Lincoln was more successful in his business than I, for his business soon carried him directly into the Legislature. There I met him in a little time, and I had a sympathy for him because of the uphill struggle we had in life.
[Cheers and laughter.] He was then as good at telling an anecdote as now. He could beat any of the boys at wrestling, could outrun them at a foot race, beat them at pitching quoits and tossing a copper, and could win more liquor than all the boys put together, [laughter and cheers] and the dignity and impartiality with which he presided at a horse race or a fist fight were the praise of everybody that was present and participated.
[Renewed laughter.] Hence, I had a sympathy for him, because he was struggling with misfortune and so was I. Mr. Lincoln served with me, or I with him, in the Legislature of 1836, when we parted. He subsided and I submerged for some years, and I lost sight of him. In 1846, when William Alston turned up as a member of Congress from Sangamon District, I, being in the Senate of the United States, was called to welcome him, then without friend and companion.
He then distinguished himself by his opposition to the Mexican war, taking the side of the common enemy, in time of war, against his own country. [Cheers and groans.] When he returned home from that Congress, he found that the indignation of the people followed him everywhere, until he again retired to private life, and was submerged until he was forgotten again by his friends. He came up again in 1854, in time to make the Abolition Black Republican platform, in company with Lovejoy, Giddings, Chase and Fred. Douglas, for the Republican party to stand upon. Trumbull, too, was one of our own contemporaries."
