A CHINESE GENTLEMAN'S HOUSE.
The commercial connections between China and Japan and this country, which must become stronger and more numerous in future years, are awakening a peculiar interest in the manners and habits of those secluded people. Our readers will be pleased with an introduction to the house of a Chinese gentleman—
He first took us to his country house, now uninhabited. It was the perfect residence of a Chinese gentleman. There was a very large garden, with bamboo hedges and large fish tanks, edged with walls of blue bricks and perforated tiles. His pigs were in admirable condition, and as beautifully kept as the Prince Consort's at Windsor. About the grounds were nutmegs, mangoes, and small creepers trained into baskets and pagodas. Inside of the house the drawing-rooms had doors sliding across circular openings. We then went on to this good gentleman's private residence, entering by a Chinese triumphal gate. He told me he has ten miles of carriage road round his estate. It is on a fine undulating tract of land, reclaimed from the jungle, and laid out with rare taste. In the outskirts a tiger killed a man the other day. In his garden I found Jocko, living in a cane cage, next door to a porcupine; there were also some rare birds. Further on some very small Brahman bulls, a Cashmere goat, and a family of young kangaroos. There were all sorts of unknown beautiful flowers placed about in enormous China vases. Here I first saw the tea plant growing. It is of the camellia tribe, three or four feet high and bears a small white flower, like the opening dog-rose; also I was shown the "moon-flower," a kind of rounded convolvulus, that only opens at night. There was a bower of "monkey cups"—the pitcher flower, which collects water, and from which Jocko refreshes himself in the jungles. The fan palm—a beautiful tree on the lawn—produced water of clear cold quality, by being pierced with a penknife. Several minute creepers were trained over wire forms, to imitate dragons, with egg-shells for their eyes; and there were many of the celebrated dwarf trees—the first I had seen—little oaks and elms, about eighteen inches high, like small, withered old men. The house here was superbly furnished in the English style, but with lanterns all about it. At six o'clock the guests arrived—mostly English—al dressed in short white jackets and trousers. The dinner was admirably served in good London style and all the appointments, as regarded plate, glass, wines and dishes, perfect. The quiet, attentive waiting of the little China boys deserved all praise. After dinner we lounged through the rooms, decorated with English prints of the Royal family, statuettes, "curios" from every part of the world, and rare objects in jade-stone and ivory. There was also a portrait of our host's son, who is being educated in Edinburgh. He was in English dress.—Albert Smith's "To China and Back."

"The Right Time to Skim Milk"—Countrywoman says, in the Rural New Yorker, "is when the milk begins to sour in the bottom of the pans. Then the cream is all at the surface, and should at once be removed, with as little of the milk as possible. If allowed to remain until the acid reaches the cream, or to become thick, it diminishes the cream, and impairs it in quantity. That housewife or dairy-maid who thinks to obtain a greater quantity by allowing the milk to stand beyond that time, labors under a most egregious mistake. Any one who doubts this has only to try to prove the truth of this assertion. Milk should be looked to at least three times a day."

"The Return Courtroom"—Chesterfield was at a rout in France where Voltaire was one of the guests. Chesterfield seemed gazing about the brilliant circle of ladies. Voltaire accosted him—"My Lord, I know you are a judge; which are the most beautiful, the English or the French ladies?"
"Upon my word," replied Chesterfield, with his usual presence of mind, "I am no judge of paintings."

Some time afterwards, Voltaire, being in London, happened to be at a nobleman's party with Chesterfield; a lady in the company, prodigiously roused, directed her whole discourse to Voltaire, and engrossed his whole conversation. Chesterfield came up, tapped him on the shoulder, and said—"Sir, take care you are not captivated."
"My Lord," replied the French wit, "I scorn to be taken by an English craft under French colors."

A Hard Blow.—The recent tornado, extending up the Holston river, in Tennessee, was very violent. A letter from Freedom, Tenn., dated the 11th instant, says that the plowed earth was carried into the air by cartful. It adds:
"At Hail's, there was a quantity of bar iron; it was picked up and carried a quarter of a mile and some bars twisted around stumps of trees that they had to prize off with handspikes. Mr. Day-vall had over 200 bushels of wheat in his barn, which was carried off, and has not been heard of as yet. Bacon, flour—in short, everything within the range, were carried up in the air. Sheep and stock were seen away up in the air."

The latest pictorial indignity offered Mr. Lincoln is perpetrated by the Milwaukee Sentinel, a paper which is avowedly one of its warmest supporters. This Journal heads its editorial columns with a diabolically ugly picture, and calls it Abraham Lincoln. No better plan could be adopted for defeating that gentleman's election. Though his private character were proved to be that of a saint, he would be disposed to vote for a man who looked so like the devil. Mr. Lincoln is by no means an eminently handsome man; but his countenance is at least human. If he looked like the picture the Sentinel gives, however, he could split rails by simply looking at them. A friend suggests that in that event he could serve a better purpose by sitting on one of his own fences near a cornfield than by going to Washington. There have been a good many bad portraits of Mr. Lincoln published, but this, on the whole, is decidedly the unkindest one of all!

A Roman Catholic peasant boy in Ireland is reported to have listened attentively to a priest earnestly denouncing the "revival," and warning the people against it as the work of the devil. "Ah! thin, your riverince," replied the lad, "it must be a new devil, for that's not the way the old devil used to make the people behave themselves."
