THE ROBESON COUNTY FAIR!

THE Sixth Annual Fair of the Robeson County Agri-cultural Society, will be held at RED SPRINGS, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the 21st, 22d and 2d days of November next. The friends of Agricultumay be engaged, whether their scale of operations be arge or small, are again called upon and earnestly soted to co-operate with the officers of this Society in oting the success of our approaching Fair. tural Societies have sided very powerfully in the de-opment of the Agricultural, Mechanical and general ogressive interests of our country, and should be mly sustained by all patriots and lovers of improve t. Our Annual Fairs have contributed much in ulating effort for improvement in the results of husandry; and it cannot be questioned that much good has ed from the encouragement thus afforded by State and County associations; for aside from the mere pecuiary value of prizes, a spirit of active emulation has acreby been awakened; and they have been the means bringing into notice the results of improved culture, ereby leading others to adopt the methods by which the e specimens of produce and stock have been obtained. The great improvement manifest in the appearance ductiveness of our farms, since the organization imparial observer that they exert a powerful influence for good, and that our Fairs are something more than

and shows for amusement and to gratify sight-seeing hese are social gatherings where new acquaintances where the bonds which unite us as a people are strength-

We hope the Farmers, Mechanics and Artists of our unit, will fully sustain their character for energy and desprize at the approaching Fair. The ladies, are will not allow it to be said that they have been sating in their duty, therefore we confidently expect oral Hall to be elegantly furnished.

he Committee takes great pleasure in announcing at the Annual Address will be delivered by the Hon J. G. Shepherd. Sister counties are respectfully solicited to co-operate with us and compete for Premiums.

THE subscriber being determined to move West, now offers for sale the plantation on which he now lives in Bladen county. The plantation contains about 1000 acres; about one half is as good farming land as the County affords, with about 200 acres cleared and in a high state of cultivation, and about 500 acres more of as good swamp land as can be found in North Carolina: on the place is a good two story building and all other necessary buildings; as well watered as any place in N. C. Also, about 1000 acres of as good Turpentine land as the county affords, the pines unboxed. Also, about 1000 acres in Sampson county, of as good as the county or State affords, all unboxed and well timbered with as good tun timber as can be found. Also, 150 acres in Bladen, lying immediately on the S. & R. Road; this land is good for farming and turpentine; and if desired can be bought my brother's land adjoining the homestead, containing about 1500 acres of good farming and turpentine land. For further particulars call on the place or address me at Cypress Creek P. O., Bladen county. If not disposed of will be sold at public sale on the first day of Dec'r 1860. I will sell my stock of cattle and hogs and a team of mules if desired. Terms accommodating; call and see; a bargain can be had.

GEORGE COULD NOT TELL A LIE. "I hate 'pattern boys," said Richard Gray; "I never feel at home with them; for if you do anything they don't think right, you never feel safe; they are almost sure to tell of you. They always

"What do you mean?" asked his brother Philip "Why our master said at school yesterday that he thought young Morris quite a pattern of good conduct, and hoped when he came to school, we should all be kind to him."

"Well, we shall see," said Philip, "when he comes; I say he will be like all the rest." George Morris came to school. Some liked him and some did not; but he behaved kindly to One day they were all at play in the playground, when George was heard crying out in great trouble, "What have I done? Oh, what have I done? What will Mr. Harding say?" "What is it? what is it?" cried several voices; and the crowd gathered quickly around to see what was the matter. "Oh," said George, "my ball has broken a pane of glass in the green-house; and I am afraid it has knocked down some of the flower-pots, for it made such a clatter. I had no right to be so near the green-house." The boys ran to the green-house, and there, sure enough, was Mr. Harding's beautiful scarlet cactus, in full bloom, thrown down upon the floor, and the plant broken. "Oh! what will Mr. Harding say?" said George; "it was only yesterday he was showing it to Squire Lowndes' gardener, and he said it was the finest he had seen for a long time."

"You'll catch it," said Richard Gray, who was a very ill-tempered boy, "you'll catch it for going so near the green-house with your ball." "Mr. Harding need not know anything about

"And," said Philip, "we will all agree that we know nothing about how the cactus got knocked down, and he will think some one threw a stone out of the road and broke it. And so you will get out of the scrape." George left them, and stood under the tree thinking of the mischief he had done, when Joe Greeen came up to him. "Be sure, George, if Mr. Harding asks you who did it, to say you did not." "I could not say that," said George, "for I did

"Yes," said Joe, "but then you needn't say so and we will all keep it quiet." "Oh!" said George, "but I shall be unhappy till I have confessed it."

"Then you are very foolish, and deserve all you will get," said Philip Gray.

in his sight. "We will see how he manages it," said Richard, as they stood in a group at the school-door, on the following morning; "depend on it, he will be glad to do as we say."

All were seated in the school-room, and the master was about to commence the duties of the day with prayer, when George was seen leaving his seat, and going towards Mr. Harding. Everything was so still, you might have heard a pin drop.

"If you please sir," said George, "I cannot tell a lie," and paused. "I know you would not willfully," said Mr. Harding. "Well?" George proceeded to give the history of the matter, and to beg Mr. Harding's forgiveness. Mr. Harding's eyes filled with tears; he could scarcely speak at first. All eyes were fixed upon him, and on the youth who dared to be true. "George," said Mr. Harding, "had you broken every pane of glass in the green house, and destroyed every flower it contains, I would forgive you. You have done right in telling me the whole truth, and I respect and love you for it.

Give me your hand-I heartily forgive you."

George bowed and went to his seat. "Perhaps," said Mr. Harding, "there is not a boy in my school who never told a lie; for boys orget, I fear, that speaking what they know to false is not the only way in which they may lie. Some deceive by their conduct, seeming to what they are not; others tell only a part of the truth, while others tell more than is true Some promise what they know they cannot do, and others neglect to do what they promise. In all these ways they practice deception. When I NOTICE.

Was a boy, as I was standing in the play-ground,
I received a blow from somebody (I did not know you for nothing!' It was he that had struck me; he tried to deceive me. This was a lie in action And have you never acted in a like manner? Oh! beware of lying in word or action. God hates lying. Never say I 'didn't do it,' either by word

The late Judge Pease, of the Supreme Court of Ohio, was a noted wag. A young lawyer was once making his first effort before him, and had thrown himself on the wings of imagination, into the seventh heaven, and was preparing for a higher ascent, when the Judge struck his ruler on the desk two or three times, and exclaimed to the Don't go any higher, for you are already out of the jurisdiction of this court."

A Harmonious Country .- If there be any virtue in music to make a nation harmonious, the people of this country should dwell together in amity, for they purchase about twenty million pages of sheet music in a year, and their expenditures for music, musical instruction, and instruments reach many millions of dollars.
