"Yes, sir, I'll go,' was his answer, for G. was a good young man, and thought no situation beneath him where he could minister to the comfort of others. He went into the souphouse, dealt out the tickets, and the soup too, for aught I know, kept the books, and, in a word, managed the business the best he could. When the gentlemen who were interested in the souphouse met to see what good it had done they were much surprised with the manner in which the acthey asked. One of them was the keeper of a large hotel. 'I must have that young man to manage,' he said, 'my concerns.' He found out G., and offered him a handsome salary to become head clerk of his establishment. G. carned the promotion, you see. He. went; but he had not been in this hotel many months before one of the boarders, the cashier of a bank, said to the hotel keeper, That clerk of yours is a noble fellow; how well he conducts your business, and it was not long before the cashier offered him a better situation in the bank. Mrs. H. C. Knight. Juvenile Theology .- A teacher at Nantucket used every morning to read passages in the Bible and expound the same as he proceeded, in order that by asking questions as to how much they remembered of his comments, he might ascertain who were the bright boys of the school. On one of sale. The terms will be made favorable to the puroccasion he read from the book of Job, thus:

"There was a man in the land of Uz, and his name was Job, who teared God and eschewed "Eschewed evil: that is he eschewed evil as I General Commission Merchants, do tobacco-he would have nothing to do with it." With this very clear and forcible elucidation of the word "eschew," he proceeded until a number of verses were read and commented on in a similar manner. After a long interval, when the young mind had time to digest its food, the teacher called upon one of the young boys, and the following conversation ensued: "Who was the man who lived in Uz?"

"Job."

"Was he a good man?" "Yes."

"What did he do?" "He chewed tobacco, when nobody else would have anything to do with it!" was Bob's answer.

A Court Room Scene .- In a recent trial of a liquor case, which occurred not a thousand miles from this city, the witness on the stand was under examination as to what he had seen at the defendant's domicile, which he said he had visited a "number of times."

"Did you ever see any spirits there, or anything you regarded as spirits?" asked the justice. "Why, yes, I don't know but I have," replied

"Do you know what kind of spirits?" "Yes."

"I kinder smelt it." "Well, now," said the Judge, straightening himself up for the convincing answer, which he supposed would be given, "will you please tell me what kind of spirits it was?"

"How do you know it?

"Spirits of turpentine." The explosion of mirth that followed this answer fairly shook the court room. As soon as to subsided the witness was discharged, the opinic being that his testimony was not to the point.
