Respect for Royalty-A practical Joke .- In a DR. BARKER will commence a COURSE of 8 LECcertain city of Canada West resides a colored man TURES at FAYETTEVILLE HALL, on Monday, by name "Frank," a functionary who indulges in Oct. 29th. The Lectures will be illustrated with a va-riety of specimens, consisting of pictures and human hair-dressing, saloon keeping, and the mysteries of cooking and general waiting. This colored skulls. Those desiring charts of character showing individual is a man of rare wit, unbounded humor, quick at repartee, and fond of a practical joke. He has moreover a certain pinguitude of system, 65-31pd so that when he indulges in a laugh, external, or shrouded beneath the black veil of his shining outside, he may be said to shake like a jelly, after the fashion of Santa Claus, in the "Night before Christmas."

NO. 966.]

Now it happened, so the story goes, when the Prince of Wales visited the city where "Frank" resides, that a ball was given in his honor, and that "Frank" was an essential accessory thereto. Without "Frank," the ball was no ball.

During the evening, after supper, and while 'Frank" was among the dishes in the culinary room, his privacy was intruded upon by certain young women, who addressed him insinuatingly, about as follows -----

"Oh! Frank, have you the glass out of which His Royal Highness drank?" To this Frank bland-ly responded "Yes." "Will you let us drink out of it?" "Certainly." "Now Frank, which side of the glass did his Royal Highness's lips touch." "Frank" indicated the identical spot.

Then the young women each and all reverently and jubilantly touched their lips to the glass. They then said, "are you sure, Frank, that we touched the place touched by His Royal Highness's lips?" To which Frank answered "certainly, for I wanted to drink after the Prince, and I had my lips on the very spot touched by his, just before you came in. I know it is the place."

Fancy the result. Young ladies exeunt, disgusted; and the facetious Frank relapsing into one W E are the only SHOE MANUFACTURERS in the State, that make a No. 1 article of KIP SHOES and Negro BROGANS, without Welts. We intend to Something of a Change.-At the late ball given to Lord Renfrew at the New York Academy of music, the Prince opened the dance with the lady of Gov. Morgan. She was the exemplar of American life, progress and industry. In her youth she was a poor girl, carning her livelihood as a milliner's apprentice. Her upward growth is but a common specimen of the strange but goodly incidents of a republican life.

Man Worship .- The accession of fortune makes vast difference in the interest which mankind feel in one of their fellows. Thomas Snooks, with a limited income and a large family, may be allowed to pass through the world amiust the most sublime indifference of society. But Thomas Snooks, if an old uncle should die and leave him a large fortune, would at once become a personage who cannot sneeze without awakening reverberating echoes through the temple of fashion, and the slightest movements of whose fingers or feet are chronicled by an obsequious press among the 'Personal Doings" of illustrious men. As it is in the world of fashion, so is it in the world of politics. To-day a private gentleman, who possesses neither power nor patronage, may go and come when and where he pleases without exciting the slightest curiosity in a living soul. He may travel on foot or on horseback; he may worship in the Gothic Cathedral or the wooden chapel; he may eat venison or sole leather, drink champagne or water, and the community remain in blissful ignorance of his tastes and habits.

But prodigious is the change should fortune chance to place our private gentleman upon one of the pinnacles of official power. All at once he becomes, not only officially, but personally, an object of the most intense consequence. The cut of his coat and the precise-degree of polish upon his boots are chronicled with the most insane avidity. A twinge of gout in his extremities causes a sympathetic agony in the big toes of the nation, and his faintest smile flashes along the electric telegraph like a gleam of auroral light.

It would not be strange if the fortunate gentleman

The magical wand of official elevation has exercised a power of transformation as remarkable as any recorded in the Arabian Nights, where humble quadrupeds are converted, in a twinkling, an affair of honor which took place in this there was any jesting whatever in the matter.
