Worth Thinking About.—An old officer of the French army, who "saw the fall of the Empire in 1814," and who "wears the St. Helena medal," has addressed a communication to the French organ in this country—the Courrier des Etrangers—in which he predicts the following results from the dismemberment of the Union:
"The United States, as they now stand, are respected by all the nations of the earth; but if they were to divide themselves into two or three confederations then would begin reanimations from all the Powers which might think themselves entitled to make them.
"As I saw the fall of the French empire in 1814 and 1815, and that each power regained often more than it had lost, I can tell you what would happen in America, if the United States should separate and find themselves reduced to civil war. In the first place, France would retake Louisiana, according to ancient treaties; Spain would reclaim Florida; England would appropriate Oregon and several other States; Mexico, under English protection, would retake the territory of New Mexico, Texas and California; and England might perhaps keep California as an indemnity for the subsidies furnished to the Mexican government in this war, against the former United States.
"Now you will ask me how all these resurrections could take place, and by what right? That is very easy to explain. It is Louis Napoleon who would begin by a very simple and logical process of reasoning; for every one knows that Napoleon III aims at consolidating all that Napoleon I had in view as to foreign policy. Now, Napoleon I, in 1803, ceded Louisiana to the United States for the sum of five millions of dollars, which the government of the United States engaged to pay to the American merchants whose goods and ships had been seized during the wars of the French republic, from 1792 to 1801. But as the United States have not paid the aforesaid five millions, and as, for more than forty years, we have been brought before Congress, session after session, a French spoliation bill, which has never been passed, therefore, as soon as the Union shall be dissolved, those who claim this sum will address themselves to Louis Napoleon, and I have no doubt, considering his character, that he will pay their demands and retake Louisiana. England, who suspects some such thing, has already ordered several ships-of-war to the Gulf of Mexico. See how Providence, having such an instrument as Louis Napoleon to work with, can bring every body back to harmony."

Unseemly Indulgences.—One of the most exceptional features in the secession proceedings, as far as they have reached, is the frantic joy and exultation with which the people of the seceding States hail the Ordinances that are one after another sounding the knell of the Union. It were one of the most ardent and enthusiastic advocates and supporters of the doctrine of separate and immediate secession, we could not but contemplate the work of disintegration, whilst it was going on, with mournful sensations.
We do not and cannot rejoice over the downfall of the Union. We think that it is a subject of melancholy contemplation, and although we will stand by Virginia in whatever determination she may come to regarding her future course, and although we have no idea that she will remain in the Union one hour after a positive and final refusal of the ruling Northern party to concede all her Constitutional rights and secure them by proper guarantees, yet, if she shall be necessitated by such refusal to secede from a Union around which have been entwined so many of her affections, we trust that she will not blot the dignity and solemnity of the act, by demonstrations like those which have marked the secession of South Carolina, Alabama, Florida and Mississippi. We hope that she will retire, if retire she shall, with the decency and decorum appropriate to the occasion. As she fired no salutes and kindled no bonfires to testify her joy at Lincoln's election, so she will indulge in no exuberant and unseemly manifestations of delight when, as a consequence of that election, there shall be a severance of her connection with her misguided, wrong-headed, stubborn and perverse sisters at the North. In bidding them farewell, it will be no shame to her to drop a tear as she turns from them over the sublime and hallowed memories of the Past that at such a moment must rise up to sadden the adieu.—Petersburg Express.

Who Shall Pay the Piper?—The secession of all the Cotton States, which is now spoken of as a fixed fact, holds out a prospect of taxes to the people of those States by no means enviable. As a small sample, we quote from the last annual report of the Postmaster General, the receipts and expenditures during the year for the postal service in each:

State.	Receipts.	Expend'ts.	Deficit.
South Carolina,	$107,536	$319,098	$211,562
Georgia,	168,665	358,180	189,515
Alabama,	25,932	71,185	45,253
Florida,	129,103	363,520	234,417
Mississippi,	101,549	378,901	277,352

This is but a single department of the Government. Not one of these States pays as much revenue on importations, into the Treasury, as it takes to collect it. Of course if free trade were established in the Cotton Republic, the revenue from duties on imports would be cut off, and the Post-Office yielding nothing, there would be no other resources than direct taxation.—Wily.

One Effect of Long-range Weapons.—Cham, the clever Parisian caricaturist, is making himself very merry with the long-range weapons now so generally in vogue. According to him the word of command on drill will be, "Attention! Spyglasses! Fire!" The new weapons enabling the hostile armies to fight at great distances, the vanquished army will be summoned by telegraph to surrender; and a victorious hero returned from the battle-field, and recounting the events of the campaign, when interrogated respecting the personal appearance of the people against whom he has been fighting, will be obliged to confess his inability to satisfy the curiosity of his hearers upon this point, as, though he saw the fire, he was quite out of sight of the enemy.

End of Civil War.—The Duke of Wellington in the House of Peers on a memorable occasion, said: "My lords, I am one of those who have probably passed more of my life in war than most men, and principally, I may say, in civil war; and I must say this, that if I could avoid, by any sacrifice whatsoever, even one month of civil war in the country to which I am attached, I would sacrifice my life in order to accomplish it."
