OFFICE SEEKING From the Boston Traveller.

Experience of an Office-Secker-in which there is a great deal more Truth than Poetry. Mr. Richard Rusty desired an office under the new Administration, and he went to Washington to get it.

At home Rusty was known as plain "Dick"—Dick Rusty, private in the "Volunteer Minute Guard," at Squam.

Dick Rusty had 'iled his seven dollar coat severely bearing a torch in the Wide Awake processions; he had served as under Secretary at the town and county Conventions, he was the very first man, in his neighborhood, who had thought of "Abo" for President, and he determined to be "counted in," sure, after inauguration. And so, carpet bug in hand, one fine morning recently, he found himself jogging up Pennsylvania avenue, in the great city of thought and magnificent disavenue, in the great city of "hacks and magnificent dis-

Washington is a very nice place! Dick had his "papers" with him, to-wit, a few badly spelled and worse written vouchers for his good character, and "sterling" political principles, and, knowing himself (in his own esteem) sound on the goose, upon reaching Washington he sailed in for the little Government office be coveted in his native town.

Having carefully enveloped his credentials, he started them to the Department to which they were addressed, and triumphanily sat himself down in the garret room of his hoarding house to await an answer from the Hon.

Secretary. And thus he waited.

One day, two, three, five, a week expired. But no reply by post, as he had expected! Now this was a very singular circumstance, (in Mr. Rusty's opinion.) and the delay very unusual in his experience. Indeed, after a time, it came to look very much like a slight towards him. What could it mean? He wrote to inquire why his "hitle matter" had not been attended to. He got no reply to this either! Again he addressed the Department upon the same subject. But he received no answer. Tuis was an outrage. Whereupon, having waited another week, he determined, valiantly, to "know the reason why."

Mr. Rusty had not omitted to stir up the Hon. Representative from his district, who assured him he would "look into his case,") and then he waited once more. He found the county editor, too, who chanced to be also an applicant for place, and he promised to attend to Mr. Rusty directly. And again he waited. Still no reply. And thus four weeks run on, and Russian terms of the country of the countr ty's money run out. Astonished and exasperated, he started at length for the Department in person. He found at least six hundred persons there before him, all religiously bent upon an errand similar to his own. He waited six mortal hours in the great windy passage way, where he was squeezed, and elbowed, and jammed, and nearly suffo-cated; but still he struggled for his "turn." He got sight of the inner door just in season to see the Hon. Secretary emerge and pass out to his carriage for home Business was over for the day, and the mob rushed down the stairs and retired!

But Richard Rusty, of Squam, was a man of business; so he followed up his object next day, and the next, and the next. At last he succeeded in getting inside, when the following colloquy ensued.

"Good morning, Mr. Secretary," says Rusty, confidently; and he grasps the Secretary's hand like a "Son of Melle" who have read his transfer in the largest meller." of Malta" who has passed his twenty-third degree.

"Good morning," responds the Hon. Secretary blandly.

"Mr. Rusty—Richard Rusty, sir," adds our friend.

"Yes, very happy, Mr. Rusty. From Indiana?"

queries the Secretary, slily.

"No sir—no."

"Oh-ah, no From Illinois, then?"

"No, sir. From Squam," says Rusty, modestly. "Squam." Yes, yes. I remember Squam.—Maine, I think! "No, Sir. Connecticut."

Mr. Rusty fidgets. So does the Secretary. Each is desirous to get out of the other's presence as soon as possible. And Mr. Rusty is only referred, with his papers, to File Clerk No. 21, who (he is informed) "takes charge" of his documents. Rusty retires in high

He trusts that those whose accounts are of long stand-ing, will exert themselves a little during his absence to wait upon Mr. File Clerk No. 21, where he inquires about his "little affair." No. 21 has five bushels of unopened letters on his table when Rusty enters. "Wnut name, sir" he asks. "Rusty, sir. Richard Rusty."

Our office-hunter is not a little nettled to learn, as he now does for the first time, from the File Clerk, that Messrs. Busty, Custy, Dusty, Fusty, Gusty, Husty, Justy, Kusty, (lager beer manufacturer.) Lusty, Musty, Nusty and Pusty, are all before him—on the list of applicants; for unfortunately, our friend from Squain is always down among the K's.

But Mr. File Clerk No. 21 is a patient man, and who is now forming a Company.

None but sound able boated men who are willing and expect to fight when required, need apply. Single men will do anything to oblige Mr. Rusty," (except to give him any lucid information.) And so No. 21 refers the applicant to Mr. Jones, No. 44 next room overhead. Up goes Rusty. Mr. Jones sends him to Mr. Buff, fourth clerk, No. 56, up two flights further. Mr. Buff knows nothing of Mr. "Rusty Squam's" case, but thinks Mr. Drabb can inform him about it. Mr. Drabb can't say certain, but directs the patient inquirer to Mr. Redd, down stairs, three flights, end of third passage to the ett, north. Kusty has no compass with him, (and realcouldn't use it if he had.) but he finds his man. Mr. Redd is very busy and very short, but has no doubt that Mr. Gray (whose duty it is to attend to these things) can inform Mr. Squanty "what to do about it." ens come forward to protect and defend har honor. He finds Mr. Gray. Mr. Gray sends him to Mr. Green. Mr. Green forwards him to Mr. Bloo. (who speaks to Mr. Brown, (there are thirty seven browns on the same floor,) and Mr. Brown hands him over to Mr. Black, up stairs once more. Mr. Black knows nothing whatever of Mr. Russy or his papers, and never heard of him or them; but civilly refers him back to Mr. Jones, where he started from. By this time Richard Rusty is disgusted, and, tho-

> Next day he commences once more, and gets lost in the multitarious windings and turns of the great, Department building Before he has time to get his nearings again office hours have expired, and he returns again to his boarding-house attic, to ruminate effice seeking especially, concluding with the philoso-phical sentiment, that Jordan is a hard road to travel. Desperate, next day, he flads "File Clerk No. 21," with whom he originally desposited his papers, and in-digentity demands his documents. After waiting several hours and making diligent search, with his papers

oughly beaten out with running over the stone stairs, in his hand he is admitted to the presence of the Secrecury, with whom-unid his despair and disappointment-Rusty has "a bene to pick" "I'm Mr. Rusty," he says, abrupily, as he enters.

"Giad to see you," responds the Secretary.
"Yes; I s pose so." says Rusry.
"Where from, Mr. Rustee?" , Where from?" exclaims the applicant, who doesn't comprehend why the Hon. Secretary has forgotten him. Squam. sir," he adds, venemently. "Richard Rusty,

"Ah, yes. I remember. Massachusetts-yes." "Ne, Sir! Connecticut" "Yes, yes. Exactly. New England-all same. When, did you arrive, Mr. Rusted?"

"A mouth ago, 'n more. Now, what I'd like to know, sir, is, am I to have my office?" "Office? What office, sir?"
"What office?" roars Rusty, amazed—"what office? Why, the one I asked for, of course?"

·Well, really-Mr. Squam, we are overwhelmed with business, you observe—"
"Rusty is my name. sir; Rusty if you please."
"Very—very, indeed. I assure you," says the Sec'y.
"Sir?" exclaimed the applicant, perplexed.
"Great confusion—terrible rush for every thing, you e-no time to eat or sleep-but your little matter will be duly attended to." "Can't you fix it now?" insists Rusty.

"Impossible, until I can examine your vouchers."
"Here they be," says Rusty, in triumph.
"Yes. Go to Mr. File Clerk No. 21—and—"

"No, I shan't," adds Rusty, bravely. "No, sir-
