More Vandalism .- A gentleman reached this city from York county yesterday. He informs us that the Yankee Vandals are continuing their depredations in the country around Hampton, and perpetrating deeds of lawlessness, which have produced a panic among the people.

The house of Mr. Wm. Anderson has been broken open, all the valuables taken therefrom, and the furniture destroyed. Even his bonds and other private papers were torn into small pieces. His outhouses and growing crops shared last outrage is supposed to have been committed by a portion of the scoundrels who are now quart. ered between Hampton and the Fort. - Pet. Ex. The Talk about Improved Arms .- We hear a great deal in these days of "improved arms;" but while, no doubt, there has been some improvement, we question whether the exaggerations of their value have not done more harm than good. They have held men to rely on the weapon instead of themselves. The poor devils from Ohio and Pennsylvania, who, three to one, fought our troops at Philippi, were armed with Minnie muskets; yet most of their balls lodged in the trees. The improved arms of the Massachusetts Rigiment, which was mobbed in passing through Baltimore, were no match for the improved men who, armed with brickbats and clubs, drove them howling through the streets. None of the battles of modern times have been as destructive of human life as those which occurred before the invention of gunpowder, when men fought with swords, spears, bows and arrows, &c., and trusted in themselves instead of their weapons. And notwithstanding all the improvements in cannon and muskets, the slaughter in the late Italian war was not to be compared to that in some of Napoleon's great battles, before any of the so-called improvements had been made. The truth is, the old Virginia rifle, the old fashioned musket, the double-barrel shot-gun, are all as good in the hands of a man who is bent on fight as any weapon that may be used. It is not the weapons, it is the men who use them, that decide a victory. Let a man's heart be influenced with vengeance and a love of country, and he will make the poorest weapon equal to the best "improvements." Anything that will send a ball—anything that will make a wound—is a dangerous weapon in the hands of a brave and determined man. On the other hand, the best weapons THE FAYETTEVILLE GAS LIGHT COMPANY has declared a Dividend of Six per cent. I per cent of which is reserved to pay expenses; payable June 15th. 1861.

ined man. On the other hand, the best weapons cannot supply the place of a courageous spirit and a good cause, and they who lean upon "improved" arms, and not upon valor and determination of soul, will find that they are leaning upon a broken reed .- Richmond Dispatch.

> Signs of Alarm .- The following paragraph from the Philadelphia Inquirer indicates that the Yankees are not quite so certain of their game as they profess to be. It admits the possibility of a defeat in Virginia, and it sees very clearly the consequences of such an event: the invaded would become the invaders. Virginia, assailed in her rights and firesides, would, in turn, carry fire and sword to the homes of her assailants. This is the determination of every man in Virginia. If ever the opportunity presents itself we will wreak a rich revenge on those who have

> "Maryland, too, would be in a blaze again!" Of course it would. The freemen there are waiting their time-and it is some comfort to know that the tyrant and all his brood live in constant dread of the uprising of that outraged people. May the day of deliverance and vengeance be near at hand!

> A defeat in a general engagment in Eastern Virginia an event certainly quite improbable-would not only lead to an immediale incursion into Pennsylvania from Virginia, but would set Maryland in a blaze again. It not the few regiments quartered in Baltimore that keep down the mob in that city; that salutary effect is produced by the overwhelming force at Washington. Any disaster to this force would be the signal for an uprising in Maryland, and a rush for plunder. With such elements of mischief around us, is it well to be content with the insufficient preparation which we have

Starving the South!-This is a vain boast of the Yankees, when God is manifesting His blessings on every hand, and sending the rain and the sunshine to fructify the earth and cause her to yield abundant increase, in the rebellious South. The crops in this section are most promising, wheat better than ever known before, and corn pushing ahead with vigorous growth. We saw on the farm of Dr. Dean near this town, last week, wheat that will yield 20 bashels to the acre, that was sown on reclaimed old field, and better lands

The Future of Yankeedom. - The N. Y. Journal of Commerce gives an estimate of the expenses of the Yankee Government for one year. Omitting private contributions and wagons, medicines, cannon, &:, the gross amount is put down at $200,000,000. It another hundred million were added for omissions, and rogueries generally, we should probably not be far from the mark. How is this vast sum to be raised? Already the Government has shown its weakness by its R. SCOTT expecting to be absent from Fayetteville inability to borrow nine millions. To meet its tend to all calls that may be made professionally. Also issue of Treasury notes.-Richmond Whig. The census of Missouri shows that State to have 1,407,536 whites, 113,188 slaves, and 3,-902 free negroes—in the aggregate 1,523,629.

The Paradise of Topers.—The Cincinnati papers state that whiskey is selling in that market at 10 cents per gallon, and the sales are very slow at this ruinous figure.

Healthful Sign .- The city of Jeffersonville, Indiana, opposite Louisville, on the Ohio river, has elected a "Breckinridge Secession Mayor," by fifty majority over the Republican candidate. This is the "Egypt" of the State.

Southern Manufactures .- The Memphis 'Avalanche' says a foundry in that city is engaged in making blank cartridge cases for Maynard's celebrated rifles. Another shop is making sabres of a description said to equal any ever manufactured in this country.
