THE COTTON STATES' FAREWELL TO YANKEE DOODLE.

Rice and cotton flout you, Once we liked you very well, But now we'll do without you. Yankee Doodle had the luck To get a new religion-

Yankee Doodle, fare you well, .

At every body's pigeon. Yankee Doodle strove with pains And Puritanic vigor,
To loose the only friendly chains That ever bound a nigger.

That when his zeal has freed 'em. He'd see a million niggers die Before he'd help to feed 'em. Yankee Doodle sent us down A gallant missionary; His name was Captain Johnny Brown,

But Doodle knows as well as I,

The Priest of Harper's Ferry. With pikes he tried to magnify The Gospel creed of Beecher But Old Virginia lifted high Propose a trick, however mean, And Yankee Doodle's willing. So, Yankee Doodle, now good-bye, Keep the gains you've gotten-Proud independence is the cry Of Sugar, Rice and Cotton.

THE WAR-WHEN SHALL THE END BE? The subjoined paragraphs are from the conclusion of an editorial article in the New York Journal of Commerce, of the 21st. There are errors in it, which will be readily detected by the reader—one is the intimation of a possible revolution in the South; nevertheless, the article will be read with interest:

We have said, and we now repeat, that the North has been deceived and misled into this war by the Northern Republican press; and since the war began they have been as constantly deceived and misled in every particular relating to the force, the ability and the courage of the foe. This deception has led to fatal results already. It is now leading us to destruction. The suppression of truths which show the strength and resources of the South, the misrepresentation of their financial and commissariat resources, the false reports of their disaffection, desertion, sickness, &c., have characterized the editorial and news column of the papers alluded to, and have so misled the minds of men at the North, that the error could only be corrected by some such lesson as was received at Great Bethel, which may thus, perhaps, be productive of good on the whole It is beginning to dawn on men's minds that this contest is not an affair of a day, or a month, or a year. If the end is to be the conquering of the Southern armies and people, that end is probably very far distant. Let no man promise himself that the battle of Manassas Junction, now apparently near, will be decisive of the war. If we are beaten at that point, is there any Northerner who proposes to give up the contest? If the South are beaten, is there any probability that Southerners will yield the contest any more than we would? They are Americans, blood of our blood, our brothers, cousins, friends-and they reason, think and feel just as we should under similar circumstances. There is, therefore, little hope of an end of the war by a decisive battle or a short campaign. Another possible end of the war is one that may now be talked of freely, though a few weeks since it was impossible to mention it. We lately published a very mild letter from a St. Louis correspondent, suggesting a possible peace by compromise. The Hartford Times copied it, and the Hartford Courant burst like a thunder cloud on the Times, charging them with treason, and flatly pronouncing it to be treason in any one to propose a compromise before we had finished the war!

Another possible end of the war is in the occurrence of another revolution in the South. It may be that the States which went mad for secession a few months ago, may change. In other words, there may be a strong Union party there some day. If we are to believe the Republican papers, the South has actually a majority of Union men who are held down by mobs. We don't believe any such thing. We don't believe there are ten Union men in South Carolina. There were many such in all the seceded States. But the attempt at coercion by arms has carried them nearly all over for the present. Is there a sane American who believes that any amount of physical force will ever prevail to make Union men out of Americans who don't choose to be such? Can you starve them into it? Is there the remotest I WILL remain in Fayetteville recruiting for the 3d Regiment State Troops ten days, and will be pleased to have calls from men who are healthy, able, willing, stood six months ago, and says to the South, "you stood six months ago, and says to the South, "you must yield, back down from all this, and give it up; we will not give you any excuse, any plea, any argument by which to move your doubting friends, you must give up at once"—so long as the North maintains this ground, just so long

We do not believe, if the South were successful, and overran the North with their armies, will call and pay me. Those who have open accounts will pay them if possible; if not, close them by note, as I am anxious to close them up early. By attending to this long as there remained a rock to hide behind while he fired, or a mountain side from which to hurl down stones on his foes. Nor do we believe any less of Southern men.

When Jackson overcame the South Carolinians HARDEE'S RIFLE AND INFANTRY TACTICS. in the matter of the revenue laws, it will be remembered that the tariff bill was changed, and thus an excuse was given to the rehals for larger thus an excuse was given to the rebels for laying down their arms. Too many persons forget this important part of this nullification contest. In all wars between equal, or nearly equal powers, the rule has been to ask everything, but to be content with a small part of the demand. In all contests the necessity of a compromise in the end is absolute. It is not in one of a thousand wars that any result is reached otherwise.

Sleeping on Watch .- We suppose that if there is one dereliction of military duty more inexcusable than any other, it is sleeping on watch. The slumber of one sentinel may seal the fate of an army, of a campaign, of a country. Every man in THE Subscriber having removed from Summerville to the Confederate Army must realize that we are at war, and at war with a most vigilant, unscrupulous of Cumberland, Harnett and Moore. His office lous and inhuman enemy.—Richmond Dispatch.
