from the citizens of this section, will be pleased to hear of any one who is willing thus to serve his country. I am authorized to say, that any one who cannot go to the war, can serve his country greatly by giving a Gun. The great want of well armed Cavalry was much felt at Manassas-some of those who were there being actually without any arms. The Double barrel Gun is intended for the Cavalry, and it is of great importance that a sufficient number of them should be obtained, as the result of the war will depend very greatly upon the number and efficiency of the Cavalry we can send into

-HE MEETS WITH "HON." MR. ELY. "Rev. Joseph Cross, Chaplain of Colonel Bate's Tennessee regiment, writes to the Christian Advocate some interesting letters from the "seat of war." We extract the following from his last: "Merciful God, what a sight for Christian eyes! Wagons and ambulances loaded with mangled and groaning men; corpses carried on litters and the shoulders of surviving comrades; heaps of legs and arms recently cut off by the surgeon; brains and blood scattered over the ground and trod into the mire; soldiers walking about with broken limbs and bandaged heads, covered with their own gore; others sitting or lying upon the wet earth, with wounds undressed and bleeding. A lady, young and beautiful, but pale as death, hurried by me, exclaiming, "where is poor Jim?" and as she disappeared in the throng, a low voice said, "She is from Alabama, Jim was her broth-Another came, with delicate feet, fit only to tread on roses, regardless of the mud through which she waded, exclaiming, "Where is he where? where?" and an officer answered, soothingly, "Yonder, in that house with the yellow flag; they have amputated the limb, and he is doing very well." The next sad spectacle was a middle-aged woman, who met a dead body borne upon a plank; at the sight of which she burst into tears and sank upon the ground, when two soldiers raised her up and carried her after her dead husband.

I saw a dense crowd and walked toward it. Within were many prisoners, sitting, lying, walking about; some sad and others sullen: some evidently uneasy, others apparently quite indifferent, and here and there one affecting mirth and jocularity. There were several of Wilson's cutthroat gang, and three of Ellsworth's Zouaves. The latter said they did not know whether another of their number had escaped death, but believed themselves the only survivors. There was a little man, with a wicked, wolfish look, as restlsss Ruthers, 'd and Polk-J. H. Carson, M. Duras a hyena in a cage. It was the Honorable Alfred Ely, member of Congress from Rochester, New York. Our Captain Clusky, having been acquainted with him in Washington, stepped up and took his hand. Most piteously the prisoner implored the interposition, in his behalf, of a man whom, a few hours before, he would gladly have seen slaughtered. Captain C. introduced to him our gallant Colonel.

"Your servant, Colonel Bate," said the prisoner, bowing obsequiously. "I am glad to meet you. You see I am in a bad fix." "Yes, sir," said the Colonel; "you are, for a member of Congress, in a very bad fix." "But you see," rejoined the honorable gentleman, throwing open the breast of his coat, "I am unarmed; nothing but a pen-knife; no uniform; merely spectator; came out with Senator Foster to see the battle; but unfortunately ventured too far, and was taken." "Mr. Ely," replied the Colonel, "a battle-field is no place for a civilian. You are a member of Congress, sir, and the representative of at least ninety thousand people. And do you think yourself a cipher in a scene like this? No, sir: the moral influence of your presence was worth a hundred soldiers to our enemies. Are you not a

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Ely, "I am a lawyer." "Then, sir," Col. B. continued, "you know that by your presence you are aiding and abetting this cruel and bloody assault upon us. It is a principle of law which you are accustomed to recognize elsewhere, and which you are obliged to acknowledge here.' He assented with a sheepish look, and continued his absurd apology, which the Colonel thus cut short: "Mr. Ely, we are glad to see you here. We want you with us, and cannot consent to part with you soon. There are men at Washington for whom we may be willing to exchange you hereafter; if, indeed, you should not be hanged as you . deserve." The battle-field, who shall describe? You could have walked over acres literally paved with the dead and the dying, and in some places were piles of gashed and gory corpses; but everywhere there appeared to be five Yankees to one Southerner. The miserable cowards as they fled left the slain and the wounded upon the field, and the former were buried by our soldiers, and the latter treated by our surgeons; while in Washington the brutal rascals were beating to death the few Southern captives they had taken! In a few weeks I hope to preach to the Walker us the city." Arrest of a Clergyman. - The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Express relates the fol-

Legion from the steps of the Capitol at Washington, on the words of General Joshua before the lowing as an amusing incident: The Rev. Mr. Lippitt, of the Episcopal Church, a native of R. I., and formerly a Professor in the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia, resides near Alexandria, and about three weeks ago officiated at Christ Church in that city. His sermon was regarded by the officer in command as a Secession discourse, and he was accordingly incarcerated in the Washington jail. Being resermon, it appeared by a note on the margin that "it was first preached twelve years ago!" The Secretary read it carefully over, and pronounced it good, sound, Christian doctrine, and forthwith Col. T. Waddill, Fayetteville Hotel, will receive the ordered Mr. Lippitt to be discharged.

The following correspondence recently passed between a gent eman and his son, who had left. college to fight for his country:

"B., Jr.-If you enlist, I disinherit you. B., Sr. "B., Sr.-Without a country I want no inheritance. I have enlisted. B., Jr."

No Law .- The impression is being made in the minds of some, that all law is suspended. The result is, now drunken villians assail quiet and espectable citizens, and do other deeds against the peace and dignity of the State. With regard to such characters, let the good citizens see that justice is meted out to the fullest extent of the law, that they may be convinced that law does yet exist .- Hendersonville Times.

An Awful Spell .- When the legislative hall. at Concord, New Hampshire, was cleared of rubbish after adjournment, we learn that there was found in the desk of one of the members a letter, which closed with this injunction, "Jane ses get her a 24 hoop skellington."
