Grand Review of the Army by the President.

-FAIRFAX C. H., Oct. 3.—President Davis, accompanied by Generals Johnston, Beauregard, and Smith, and their Aids, had a grand review of the troops this morning. Generals Walker, Longstreet, Cocke, and Jones were out with their brigades; also, Major Walton's battalion of Washington Artillery. The day was beautiful, and the troops were in high spirits. It was a magnificent affair, and occupied three hours and a half. The President left for Manassas at 5 o'clock this evening, en route for Richmond. The Lankees have made no further advance.

Vandalism .- A correspondent of the Utica (N. Y.) Herald, belonging to the N. Y. 26th Regiment, writes as follows from Camp Vernon,

"There is usually no lack of provisions. When a volunteer gets into a field of green corn, or into an apple or peach orchard, and pitches up a penny to see who owns the fruit, he generally wins. Cows find new dairymen, and pigs suffer martyrdom on bayonets. It is a sad sight to see the condition of some houses on the "neutral ground" between the two armies, where scouts of both parties commit their depredations. I went, for instance, last Saturday, to the splendid residence of Col. Kemper, situated just in view of Mt. Vernon, and on the skirts of the valley which constitutes the immense and beautiful farm of George Washington. The family had been obliged to go South, leaving the house in charge of the servants. It has been common plunder ever since. Magnificent bureaus, tables, stands, clocks, &c., are broken or carried off. The pickets cut off as much of the fine carpets as they think they need for their tents, and carry them home ad libitum. A certain Northern Surgeon took a valuable piano and sent it home, which, as I did not get a chance at it myself, I considered rather a "small piece of business." It was sad, on the whole, to reflect that the residence of a once affectionate and happy family should be thus polluted, the heirlooms carried off by a thoughtless soldiery, and the papers, pictures, souvenirs, and even love letters, subjected to the curious and impertinent inspection of hostile strangers." Paul Jones .- "It is only adventurers that perform great actions, and not the sovereigns of large Empires." So says Montesquieu, and the experience of the world proves the truth of the maxim.

Commodore Paul Jones was an adventurer, but he did more for the naval glory of the young American republic than did the government itself. His little vessels bearing but few guns, manned by few men, but directed by a lion heart and an imperial will, carried terror and destruction into the British channel, and threatened even Albion's haughty King with a visit. Are there no such men now? Is the race of the sea lions extinct? Cannot something be done to show our ability and power upon the ocean as well as on the land? Enormous Expense of the Lincoln Government

The Loan a Failure.—We give as matter of news and information to our readers, what we learn from the Northern press-that the daily expenditures of the Lincoln Government are now two millions of dollars. Just think of that-two millions per day! While the Lincoln Government is expending two millions per day to pay horse and mule con-tractors, shoe, bread, clothing, and all kinds of army outfit contractors, the Government loan is 10 " Hammers, 20 doz. Hatchets.

20 Doz. Axes, 150 Doz. Cut Tacks, 15 Doz. Coffee monied institutions of the North. Their papers announce that one city took a tew hundred thousand, and an individual or two took a thousand or so. Why, that wouldn't buy enough beans for one day's rations.

Last year we noticed that a patent had been taken out at the North for tanning leather by the use of dog fennel or wild cammomile. We wish some of our planters would try the substitute for oak bark, and give us the result. It is highly important at the present time to stir up the homemade leather question.

Dry the dog fennel, and then boil it thoroughly in a large kettle, and reduce the bulk of the decoction by boiling it until it has suitable strength. If this material will do, this country can furnish leather enough for home use with but little trouble .- Planters (La.) Banner.

"The Union men of the South."-We have been for some time a little suspicious that the Yankees were being sold by some of the men who professed to be "Unionists just driven from the South on account of their love for the United States," and in the New York Herald of the 11th we find a confirmation or our suspicion. The Herald states that a few days before two families, pretending to hail from North Carolina, reached Cincinnati in a destitute condition. They gave a touching account of the manner in which they had been treated by the secessionists of the Old North State. They so wrought upon the feelings of the people of "Porkopolis" that a large sum of money was collected and given to them, and they went on their way rejoicing. Shortly after two families from Tennessee appeared, the members of which had barely escaped with their lives, and they too procured considerable money from the soft-hearted Cincinnatians. It turned out, however, that the two families from North Carolina, and the two families from Tennessee were composed of the same individuals, and that the unsuspecting and credulous Buckeyes had been "taken in and done for" by some sharpers who were not even residents of any of the Confederate States. They may console themselves with this reflection, however, that the statements made by these bogus Southerners were as true as the majority of stores they have heard from the lips of refugees from the Sunny South.—Mobile (Ala.) Advertiser.

A Good Way to find out the Girls.—A man came to Philadelphia some years ago exhibiting six boys and six girls, but all of them were dressed in girl's clothes. They were all so much like girls in appearance that he made money betting that no one could tell t'other from which. An Irishman went out and returned with a dozen apples. Throwing one to each of the children, he observed that some caught them in their hands; these, he said, were boys. Others held their aprons; these, he said, were giris. Pat hit right.
