A Tribute to Female Patriotism .- We subjoin a lettter written by a Virginia lady, acknowledging the reception of a testimonial from the First Regiment North Carolina Volunteers. Mrs. Tunnell resided near Hampton, and the Federalists, in their attempt to surprise our little army at Bethel Granville - A. W. Venable, T. L. Hargrove, on the 10th of June, arrested her husband, with every one else whom they could, in order to prevent the news of their advance reaching the Confederate force. Mrs. Tunnell managed to elude them, and in the darkness of the night made her way through the woods, and performed an act of devoted patriotism which proved an incalculable benefit. Gen. Hill speaks of her as having saved our army from destruction, and she truly deserves the tribute accorded her by the gallant North Carolinians. Deprived of her little possessions, and driven from her home by the ruthless invaders, she hopefully looks forward to the day when a complete triumph of Southern arms shall reward the efforts of our patriotic men, and punish the outrages of a wicked and unprincipled Gov-

YORR COUNTY, Oct. 19, 1861:
Gen. D. H. Hill, Cols. C. C. Lee, and James H. Lane, and members of the 1st Regiment N. C. Vols.

have given me the most intense gratification, but to have won the approval of brave men—to be deemed by them not unworthy this generous evidence of their kindness—will always be to me a source of joyful remembrance, which I shall cherish through life, and, I hope now, with just pride, bequeath as an inheritance to my children. May it be to them an incentive to imitate your patriotism and your virtues. May a kind Providence ever "shelter your heads in the day of battle." May each of you be the recipients of the reward due to distinguished valor and merit. Yours, tru'y and sincerely, HANNAH TUNNELL.

Characteristic Letter from Gen. M' Culloch .-An Arkansas paper publishes the following letter from Gen. McCulloch, addressed to an officer who had taken some slight exception to the General's report of the Springfield battle:

CAMP JACKSON, Ark., Sept. 24, 1861. Col. De Rosey Carroll: Dear Sir: Your report has been received. I am unfortunate in not rendering satisfaction to you and others in my official report of the battle of Oak Hills. It was my desire to do justice to every man under me, and to give offence to none.

This was more than man could expect to accomplish, under the circumstances, as it was impossible to see all that occurred on a field so extensive, broken in surface, and covered with woods; and to be guided by information obtained from others, you have but to read the newspapers of the day, published in your own State, to see how contradictory that information would have been. In conclusion, permit me to suggest that the best mode of settling the whole matter is to try it over again!

BEN McCULLOCH. Gen. Wool Sustains Fremont and Condemns the Administration .- The following paragraph, from the New York Herald, of the 16th, plainly indicates a difference in sentiment between Lincoln and his Generals in regard to the conduct of

Your obedient servant,

Fremont: There is no doubt but it was intended by the THE undersigned, appointed Receiver under the Sequestration Act, for the counties of Orange, Wake, Cumberland and Harnett, hereby gives notice to all persons having any lands, tenements or hereditaments, eral, looking over the field with the official records 'highest authorities" at Washington to displace eral, looking over the field with the official records therein, of or for any alien enemy of the Confederate before him, showing the number of men and a-States of America, speedily to inform me of the same, mount of material at the disposal of Fremont, would not take command unlesss largely reinmense successes with inadequate means. This the Cabinet Caucus considered making too many and all lands, tenements and hereditaments, goods and conditions, and so let Fremont remain in command. The country will rightly consider the act of Gen. Wool a rebuke of the administration, and a justification of Gen. Fremont. There is no excuse—there can be none—for the ragged and destitute condition of the troops at Cheat Mountain. Ample supplies of clothing have been provided. There has been ample transportation made ready. Therefore some of the officers in the employment of the United States are thieves or incapable. There is no evading this point. The soldiers know it, and the people at home know it.

Huts for the Soldiers .- A bill has been introduced into the Tennessee Legislature to provide comfortable wooden buts, instead of canvas tents. for the comfort of her soldiers during the winter. This is a good move, and deserves to be followed by the other States. There is nothing we can do for the comfort of our soldiers that ought to be in our power for the soldiers this winter.

The Enemy in the Virginia Mountains .- The of great discomfort and suffering to both armies. A correspondent of the Cincinnati Times gives a terrible picture of the suffering in the Northern camp, particularly on the night of the 26th of September, when a terrible rain storm burst upon the army. Two regiments were exposed to it without any shelter. "The stoutest men fell completely exhausted by the rains and blasting winds. Hundreds were struck down by the chills. The fort and all the reliable places of shelter were badly as the men.

"The weather grew colder during the night. "A number of stragglers were found unable to walk, and were brought into camp.

"I wished that the whole country could look down upon that scene last night, and feel the piercing winds as they shivered the half clothed, T and within eight miles of the terminus of the Fay-etteville & Western Rail Road on Deep River, truth—the negligence of those at home.

"Only one death is known. "Some ten or fifteen horses were found dead this morning, and others in a dying condition. "The road down the mountain is badly cut by the torrents, and the telegraph is prostrated. "The sick-and there are many of them-are
