dozen other cities; and its armies were to have wintered in our seats of wealth, luxury, and fashion. In no part of this brilliant and luxurious programme have they succeeded. They have not a single city of any size in the South; nor do they hold a single county of the whole Confeder-In every other respect, but in reference to this striking fact, the campaign has been a complete failure. Whenever they have attempted to penetrate our country in force, they have been driven back with ruin and slaughter. Nowhere, where the people have in mass opposed them, have they been able to establish themselves upon a firm foot-This great fact cannot fail to have its proper effect upon the public opinion of the world. Four hundred millions of dollars have been expended; from three to four hundred thousand troops brought into the field; eight months of strenuous campaigning has been performed; and the grand result is, the possession of a half-Yankeefied and exposed portion of Virginia; of a part of Kentucky voluntarily surrendered to them by the treachery of a set of disgraced politicians and timid properthe "Union" sentiment was strong enough to prevent the military organization of the true South hold no part of our soil, except that which our people surrendered into their hands. They have won no victories. They have gained no glory or renown. They came into the war, proud of their go out of the campaign smarting under repeated in all the qualities of warriors.

The North have brought a vast concourse of men into the field. Tkey have expended an ocean of money. They have planned stupendous campaigns. They proposed to accomplish long triumphant marches; to utterly subjugate eleven sovereign States; to take possession of wealthy and luxuriant cities; to apportion vast landed properties among their troops; to set several million of negroes free and to establish the Federal Government throughout the old Union in such impregnable strength, that nothing could shake it, and none dispute its supremacy, forever more. They proposed to do all this in a very few months. A man in their midst who had hinted a doubt of its accomplishment in less than four months from the date of Lincoln's call for seventy-three regiments, would have been instantly bastiled in Fort Lafayette. But nothing of all this splendid programme has been accomplished. Their money is gone, the prestige of their troops lost, and foot-ing is obtained nowhere in the South, except where treachery and deception have accomplished for them what their valor could not. Nay, they have lost ground; for whereas they felt secure of Kentucky, that State, after hard fighting, is sure now to be ours; and whereas they thought they had effectually overrun Missouri, they find the indomitable spirit of that people unconquerable, and that they have suffered their severest reverses in the very State which they thought most surely their own. The South, on the other hand, commenced the campaign, proposing nothing but self defence; and that defence she has successfully made. At the outset of a war for which she was not prepared, and which she did not expect, she was incapable of undertaking offensive warfare. She planted herself upon the defensive; and she has succeeded in whipping the North and baffling all their grand designs. She has inspired her soldiers with the prestige of victory, and will, in another campaign, be ready to avail herself of this prestige, and of her more perfect state of preparation, to make her adversaries feel her power with a vengeance. They are already aware that we are their masters; and in another campaign we will assert that character upon them with a strong hand .- Richmond Dispatch."

RESULT.

The season for active military operations has so nearly closed that we can now estimate the re-sults of the first year's struggle between the North and the South. If we take as the standard of comparison what the aggressive section proposed at the outset and have endeavored to accomplish. the case is clear that its campaign has been a complete failure. The North was to have overrun the South in two months; it was to have taken Richmond, Nashville, New Orleans, and a acy in undisturbed possession, except where the inhabitants themselves, by their own disloyal agency, secured them possession. It is a remarkable fact, developed at the close of a campaign in which the North have put forth its most strenu-ous exertions, that they hold no portion of the Southern territory except such as was virtually surrendered to them by disloyal Southern people.

ty holders; and of those regions of Missouri where ern people. They have conquered nothing. They strength, and confident of their prowess, expecting to frighten us by their mere approach. They defeats, the laughing-stock of the world, and feeling in their hearts their utter inferiority to us

The worst spent four hundred millions that ever slipped out of a public treasury, have been the millions which the North has paid for eight months of campaigning, which has resulted in nothing but in teaching them that their volunteers are cowards, and cannot be trusted in the field.

Southern Appreciation of the Brave .- The Charleston Courier gives the following instance of Southern generosity: With pride and pleasure we record the gratitude of the Southern people, in announcing that no less than thirty thousand dollars, made up by the free will offerings of men, women and chil-dren, now stands to the credit of the widow and children of the martyr Jackson, the brave Alex-andrian, who fell in defence of the flag of his country.

Should the marauders penetrate to our hearth stones, we trust that they will find that the example of Jackson is not lost upon the fatners, husbands, sons and brothers of our city.

Recognition of the Southern Confederacy .-A Paris correspondent of the N Y. Herald writes: It is well known here that the Chambers of Commerce of Lyons, Rouen, St. Etienne, Mul-house, &c., have petitioned this Government to at once recognize the Southern States, and thus put an end to the impending ruin of those manufacturing French towns.

Age does not Hurt it .- Mr. Robert Ramsoy, years ago, of the sugar cane, and if any thing the quality of the article, which is very superior, we would say had been improved by age. My. Ramsey will make a large quantity of the article this year .- Statesville Express.
