The Privates.—Whilst laurels are heaped upon the heads of the victorious leaders of our armies, the people will the noble soldiers through whose disinterested Miss Alice Campbell will es have been achieved. Whilst behind none in admiration of the conjunction of the c and sublime self-sacrifice our wonderful successour armies are directed, and without which the best armies would be like ships without helmsmen or captains, we cannot but feel for the humble soldiers in the ranks emotions of respect and affection as deep and pervading as any which successful rank can elicit. Even if we do not take into consideration the fact that a large proportion of the privates in the Southern army are genposition, the most profound sympathies of every generous heart must be awakened by the toils, the sufferings, and the matchless daring of these heroic men. They have given up homes where none of them ever knew want or hardship, for a to the lot of humanity. They have endured the extremities of heat and cold, and the keener pangs of long and, perhaps, unending separation from their homes, to save a country which is dearer to them than life. They have done all without even the prospect of reward, or even dis tinction, for the miserable pittance which is all that the Government can be tow is no compensation for services like theirs, and the honors wor by the whole are so widely diffused that the individual share of glory is small indeed. It is a touching sight to behold these modest, war-worn heroes, often without an arm or a leg, by whom even a kind word or a look is received as a benefaction, and who are too often treated with official insolence by those who are not worthy to tie the latchets of their shoes. But virtue, in its humblest estate, must, here or hereafter, receive its appropriate reward from Him who knows how to estimate the value of every human action, and whose treasury is large enough to reward ultimately without stint all who deserve favor at His hands .- Richmond Dispatch.

The Yankee Robbers-A Precious Confession. -A correspondent of the St. Louis Republican. who was with Curtis on his march through Arkansas to Helena, says that on the Arkansas side of the river, outside of Helena, "there is not a house for ten miles but what has been pillaged from cellar to garret by Curtis' troops." Trunks were broken open, bureaus opened and sacked, in fact every drawer, cupboard, trunk, chest, sacked has been left, it was because the soldier's knapsack would hold no more, or wagons could not be pressed to haul it." He says he has heard it said that Custis has regiments that could steal either Vicksburg or Richmond in a week without firing

Yankee Depredations .- A correspondent, passing over the late seats of war in Virginia, writes the Savannah Republican:-Despite the brilliant successes of the Confeder rate arms along the route I have just travelled, it fence is left; wheat stands in the shuck rotting in

ry. Fine mansions have been broken open and rifled, carpets, furniture and pianos cut up and broken to pieces. In one instance, I am credibly informed, these brutes entered a gentleman's house, abstracted the interior works from a superior rose-wood piano, and placing the dead body of one of their soldiers in the case, thus buried him." "The Devil or General Jackson .- A correspondent of the Savannah Republican writes from Virginia the following incident connected with one of Jackson's late victories:

From the Cedar Run route they [the Yankees] rushed through Culpeper as if "Old Nick" was at their heels. I was told an anecdote at the latter place of a Yankee officer who had been stopping there with a widow lady. On leaving for an advance movement, he bid her good by, saying his destination was Richmond, and that he would soon be able to assure her of the fall of that Rebel strong-hold, and the consequent suppression of rebellion. From the battle of Cedar Run this same officer came rushing by in hot haste, when the lady hailed him, why such hurry, and what was the news in Richmond? "Oh!" said he, "the Devil or Gen. Jackson is behind us, and they may bring you the news from Richmond-I am say, "a-kiting."
