EXTRAORDINARY BANK ROBBERY. The subjoined letter, extracted from a late English paper, relates the particulars of a criminal enliberty allowed the private soldier than in any other committed on the banking house of Parodi, the richest bankers in all Italy. The facts are these,

and are detailed in a letter from Turin:-The banking-house of Parodi, the richest banker in Genoa, is not far from the postoffice, in the Via Nuova, one of the main thoroughfares in the city, and always full of traffic. On the two days before the robbery, Signor Parodi was repeatedly visited by an elegantly dressed stranger, who desired information respecting a loan, and as to the mode in which a large sum might be remitted from Rome. At 2 P. M. on the 1st of May, Signor Parodi was engaged, with his son and eight clerks, in receiving payments and deposits, when the same person presented himself again, accompanied by another in travelling costume. Recognizing him at once, Parodi told him he had not been able to procure the required information. "Thanks," replied the stranger, "but this is not my present business." At the same time, two other persons, dressed nearly in the same style, came in, whilst another pair appeared at the entrance and took post there. One of the first four then produced a big roll of silk cord, and all the six drew from their pockets either double-barreled pistols or daggers. "Silence!" cried the leader of the gang, "the first man that stirs or speaks is a dead man, and"—clapping his pistol to the banker's breast—"we shall begin by killing Signor Parodi; but if no one budges we shall do no harm to any one; we only want the money." None of the ten dared to move; they were petrified. Then two of the gang, having tied every man's hands behind his back with the silk cord, led him into the adjoining room, and making him sit down on the ground, tied his legs together, the leader meanwhile keeping his pistol at Signor Parodi's breast. and another of the gang standing, pistol in hand, at the door of the inner room. The ten prisoners being thus bound, each of them had his mouth stopped with a cravat. But meanwhile other perons came to the bank on business, and these were attended to by the pair who were posted at the entrance door. The moment they stepped in they were silenced in the same way, led into the inner room, and bound and gagged as the others had been before them. Seven were thus served, among whom was a postman, who brought sixty thousand francs in bank notes, which were overlooked by the robbers. These primary operations having been accomplished four of the robbers remained on guard, whilst the other two sacked 700,000 francs in notes, and 100,000 francs in gold. Content with this bounty they kissed the banker's son on the forehead, telling him to cheer np, but to keep silence for at least ten minutes onger, and away they went quite coolly, in sight of a great number of persons in the court yard and the street. They separated at once, and disappeared in various directions. Notice was given by telegraph to all the railway stations, and all the outward bound vessels were examined, but not a trace of the six thieves could be discovered.

Discoveries in Jerusalem .- An account of Signor Pierotti's discoveries in the subterranean topography of Jerusalem has been published. Employed by the Pasha as an engineer, he has discovered that the modern city of Jerusalem stands on several layers of ruined masonry, the undermost of which, composed of deeply beveled and enormous stones, he attributes to the age of Solomon, the next to that of Zorobable, the next to that of Herod, the next to that of Justinian, and so on till the times of the Saracens and Crusaders. He has traced a series of conduits and sewers leading from the "doom of the rock," a mosque standing on the very site of the altar of sacrifice in the Temple, to the Valley of Jehoshaphat, by means of which the priests were enabled to flush the whole temple area with water, and thus to carry off the blood and offal of the sacrifices of the brook of Kedron. The manner of this exploration was very interesting. He got an Arab to walk up through these immense sewers, ringing a bell and blowing a trumpet, while he himself, by following the sound, was able to trace the exact course they took. About two years ago be accidentally discovered a fountain at the pool of Bethesda, and on his opening it a copious stream of water immediately began to flow, and, strange to say, has flowed ever since. No one knows from whence it comes or whither it goes. This caused the greatest excitement among the Jews, who flocked in crowds to drink and bathe themselves in it. They fancied, it was one of the signs of Messiah's coming, and portended the speedy restoration of their commonwealth. This fountain, which has a peculiar taste like that of milk and water, is identified by Signor Pierotti with the fountain which Hezekiah built, and which is described by Josephus. The measurement and position of most of the remains accord exactly with the Jewish historian's descriptions. Some of the Signor's conclusions are disputed, but no one has succeeded in so disintering the relics of the Holy City.

Iron Plated Ships .- The latest experiment in England with iron-clad ships is the shield ship Royal Sovereign, now in progress at Portsmouth. The armor will be five and a half inches thickness, and will have a backing of two feet eleven inches of timber. The armor plating will be twelve feet in depth, being four rows of plates laid longitudinally five feet below and seven feet above the wate line.

From the upper edge of this plating the sloping deck extends to the crown of the towers, with a rise of two feet in twenty feet. The contract I will pay Thirty Dollars for each above mentioned deserter to any person who will deliver them in jail £50 per ton. Mr. Matherson of Devonport Dockyard, has devised an invention and machine promising great value and service in the application of iron armor. It has been submitted to the Admiralty, and elicited a favorable report. This machine, when screwed up to a ship's bottom or side, takes an exact impress of the mould for the armor plate. and another machine, also designed by Mr. Matherson, bends the iron to the mould within the fraction of an inch.-Richmond. A Great Feat.—A young man, named Georgo Miln, a baker in London, ran on the Montrose road one hundred yards, and picked up a hundred stones placed a yard apart, lifting a stone at each run from one end of the line and returning with it to the starting point. The first fifty were lifted it to the starting point. The first fifty were lifted in six minutes, and the whole distance was ac-Blank Warrants for sale here. . complished in forty-six.
