"The Contagion of Secession."-Under this THE attention of all absentees from my company is head the New York Tribune has a long article, from which we copy the first paragraph, showing that they are beginning to be aware of the desperate straits to which this war is reducing the North. One could almost feel pity for the miserable condition of even a base people, with whom we have been united so long. Hear the Tribune:

"We are beginning to feel the effects of woful example. The diabolical spirit of Rebellion not only encounters us in the field, but it has entered our legislative chambers, and, under the malign prompting of the Democratic party, bent upon son; but success has opened their mouths, and filled their hearts with abominable political devices. We are beginning to see that about the worst battle lost to the Union cause, thus far, is that of the New York State Election. Nobody believes Horatio Seymour to be friendly to the Administration or to feel any honest sympathy with its embarrassments-yet he is elected Governor. The mob in Albany has given us a bitter foretaste of possible anarchy. From the West, we conspiraceis tending to fresh ruptures and the final overthrow of the Republic. Wicked men, even constantly in metion. We have been in service eight months and have not lost a man by sickness. To the ly to dally with disunion; and propose, since discrete, sons of the gallant "Old North State!" Your fragments of our institutions. All this is terrible. We can better afford to lose fifty fights than thus to weaken the morality of our cause. We can better afford to submit to invasion, than thus to make disintegration familiar to our constituencies. We can better afford to let the Slaveholding soldiers bivouac in the Capitol, than to be betrayed into negotiations which are full of danger, or to dally with compromises which, with their adoption, must precipitate us into unmitigated anarchy. Already, we begin to hear of Western Confederacies, of New England Confederacies, of O'Store, a roll of Confederate Treasury Notes. The finder will be liberally rewarded on returning the motern than the Book Middle States transmogrified into Middle Confederacies. Already, we have hints of new and tempting combinations, aiming at safe and contempting combinations, aiming at safe and convenient boundaries and the monopoly of internal navigation. Already, the coming Congress easts its dark shadow before; and, busy as the Devil always has been in Washington, a time is coming when he will redouble his activity in that uneasy seat of an endangered Government." A Brace of Yankee Generals .- A Gen. Cross ret, lately in command of the yankee army at Winchester, Va., granted passports to some ladies to come South. Just then he was superseded in command by Gen. Milroy, who sent a squad of soldiers after the ladies, brought them back, and had their trunks and persons searched for contraband articles, but found none. Crosaret was very indignant, said "he did not come there to fight women," and forthwith tendered his resignation. Milroy immediately placed him under arrest. Crosaret is not fit for the yankee army if unwilling to fight women. Milroy is.

Burning Leather to prevent Small Pox .-The Richmond Examiner says that previous to the daily burning of old scraps of Leather in the Libby prison and Castle Thunder, there were tracted before the burning commenced.

Both the preventives of small pox, and the only ones as yet discovered, thus originate in the skin of the bovine species. Cotton .- A ship with 1,700 bales of cotton from the Cape of Good Hope, grown from Sca Island seed, had reached Liverpool. Another vessel had brought 350 bales of cotton from Portugal. Large quantities of cotton seed were being imported into Liverpool and thence exported to new cotton fields.
