THE REVOLUTION IN POLAND From late Europeon papers some horrible de tails of the Muscovite atrocities are derived:

In Lithuania, since the arrival of the Governor General, Mourevieff, every day has been marked by an execution. On Monday, a telegraphic despatch from Cracow stated that Count Plater had been hanged at Wilns by order of the Governor General, adding that a young student, M. Houri Abieht, and a priest, M. Kenarski, had met with the same fate at Warsaw. The Russian official journals contain a list of all the executions which have taken place during the last week at Wilna, among which are those of the Priest Zazoron, aged twenty-eight years, shot; Priest Ziemeelki, aged sixty years, shot; M. de Laskiewicz, shot; M. de Kolyske, hanged. The most illustrious of these victims, Count Leon Plater, bears one of the oldest and most honored names in Poland. What adds to the odiousness of these barbarous executions is, that none of these men who have just been struck down, were taken with arms in their hands. Count Plater was arrested in his chateau and the sole complaint made against him by the Russian Governm't was that he had concealed arms. All those who were handed over to the executioner at the same time as Count Plater, were arrested before the proclamation of the amnesty. A letter in the "Temps" gives a frightful account of the circumstances attending some of these executions. The Abbe Ischora, who was shot on the 3d, in the presence of an immense crowd, at Wilna, was not killed at the first discharge of musketry, although twelve soldiers are supposed to have fired at him at only a few paces' distance. The soldiers reloaded and fired a second time. Of course the popalace believed this was done intentionally. Kelyske was hung under most revolting circumstances. A cord was put round his neck while he was on the ground, and he was slowly hoisted up to the plat-form. By some means he fell, and for ten minutes he was in a state of great agony, during which time the soldiers struck him several times with their muskets. The people of Lithuania seem for the moment stupefied with horror. The national committee of the district have issued a proclamation stigmatizing these horrors in the strongest language, and calling on the people to avenge them. Gen. Mouravieff has issued an ordinance proclaiming that the penalty of the knout will be inflicted upon all ladies dressed in mourning. Several ladies are detained as hostages, and are threatened with death unless their husbands surrender themselves to the authorities.

More than one thousand of the landed proprietors are imprisoned in the casemates, and preparations are being made for those arrested in Gredne. for which purpose the sequestered convents in Wilna have been assigned.

Is a word, the terror now introduced by Gen. heart of every one, and worse is expected. The insurrectionary bands are being multiplied and victorious. The peasants are favorable to the movement, except partly in the Government of Mohtlew. They say in their blunt language that as soon as the French make their appearance they will all side with the insurgents, and not leave alive a single Muscovite in Poland.

A letter from Cracow, on the 9th ultimo, states that among the Russian officers remarkable for their cruelty as Gen. Count Toll. Having been appointed to guard the callway, he arrogates to himself the right of life and death over all the inhabitants of the district through which the railway passes. Having lately occupied the town of Ostrow, in the district of Ostrolonka, with two companies of infantry and one hundred Cossaeks, ie searched all the houses and threatened the wemen and children that if they were discovered to hold communication with the insurgents they should be flogged to death. He sent for a weak thy Israelite named Bereck and said to him: "You are the owner of a house in this town?" "Yes," replied Bereck. "Is there not a tailor living in that house?" "Yes." "How is he employed?" screamed the General, clinching his fist at the same time. "He lives by his labor." "You are a liar; he makes uniforms for the insurgents?" "I have not seen him, and I cannot tell anything about that.". "Well," replied the General, "to teach you to know henceforth what your tenants. are doing, you shall receive two bradered lashes? The General's decree was punctually executed by the Cossacks, and the unfortunate Bereek died two hours afterwards. The General set out the fellowing day for the town of Brok; and on his passage he commanded that the State forests should be set on fire. By his command seven hundred and fifty acres of full grown timber were consumed.

is content to be a mere spectator of, look at the following summary: During these last five months the Russians in the Kingdom alone have destroyed by fire and pillage no less than twentyby calling on the subscriber and obtaining a ticket for eight towns and twenty-three villages, destroyed about sixty palaces and halls, and put to sword: above two thousand wounded, clergymen, children, old men and women, not to speak of outrages on ladics and girls not older than eleven. Yet the barbarities committed in the Kingdom cannot be compared with those perpetrated Lithuania, Wolynia, and the Ukraine. tleman just come from Wolynia tells me the only safe place for a Pole is the camp of the rebels; but how are we to expose ladies and children of tender age to such a life? It is for this we grieve, not for ourselves, since, remaining at home, we run the risk of being murdered by the infuriated peasants or drunken soldiers, while by going to the camp we can at least die gloriously.
