FRENCH ELECTIONEERING. The correspondent of the Times, at Paris, writing on the 17th of December, tells the fol-

The brother of a high functionary in Paris was started for one of the northern districts at the last general election, which, as you may remember, began on Sunday, the 31st of May. It is superfluous to observe that a person with his nearest relative in so exalted a station was not an opposition candidate. Being powerfully secondn a gredit of six months with interest from sule, ed in his canvas by all the officials, he was reis within a mile of Lillington, the County Site, and is very valuable, presenting advantages rarely offered in this county. There is a very valuable MILL SITE on the iand. Any person desiring to examine the premises will apply to Hugh McLean, Esq., or to Gen. A D Mo-Lean, either of whem will take pleasure in showing the accosted them, inquired after their health, and that of their mothers and sisters, wives and history in the most officients manner, and children, in the most affectionate manner, and ended by asking them whether they would take a little refreshment after their walk on a warm day. They smiled consent, and accepted the invitation with many thanks. Adjourning to a public house close by, the hospitable stranger ordered the publican to regale them plentifully with bread, cheese, sausages and wine. The order was complied with, and they ate and drank their fill amid profusion of thanks.

"It is not to me you owe thanks," said their generous cutertainer: "it is to M. X—, whose affection for honest men like you is known to all the country round, and who never thinks of you without tears in his eyes."

"M. X— is very good to think of us, and we should be delighted to thank him in person for giving us such a good breakfast, only we don't know where to find him." "My good friends, there is no occasion to give yourselves any trouble. M. X-, who is the wealthiest man living, is the Government candidate for the district; and if you really wish to show your gratitude, you have only to step over the way and drop your tickets in the ballot-box." The peasants looked at each other with a very puzzled air. "We would, sir, do that or anything else, to please so hospitable a gentleman; but, we are sorry to say, we cannot vote."

"Cannot vote! How is that? What do you mean? You haven't lost your civic rights, I hope? You look much too honest to have ever incurred such a misfortune.'

"We are honest men, sir, and we have never done anything against the law; but the truth of the matter is, we cannot vote because we are not Frenchmen; we are Belgians." . "Belgians! And you have eaten whole kilometrees of my sausages, and drunk an entire cask of wine, and all for nothing!-You are a pack What he said was not heard, for he ran off amid the laughter of the hystenders veved and ashamed, and swearing, like Maitre Corbeau, "qn'on ne "y prendrait plus." The Belgians returned to their homes with high notions of French hospitality, but since that day the impulsive agent cannot bear the sight of a Belgian. The Mortality in the Yanker Armies .- It ap-NDER an order of the Court of Piess and Quarter Pears from statistics that the general mortality rate of the armies of the United States during the first year of the war, was 67.6 per thousand of mean strength, including with deaths from disease these from wounds and injuries. The mortality from disease alone was 50.4 per thousand; that from wounds and injuries of every kind, 17.2 per thousand. The average annual mortality from disease alone, in the U.S. army, during 18 years of peace, was 24 per thousand. In the U.S. army, during the Mexican war, 109.8 per thousand. In the British army, during the Crimean war, 232 per thousand. In the British army, during the year 1859, 9 per thousand.
