A Mother puts out the eyes of her Son to keep him from the War .- A deed to make humanity A LL revenue are hereby notified to deliver their title of the Cotton to DAN'L MeINTOEH by the 26th day of ugget inct or they will be liable to the five fold penalty and the Cotton at the Cin House will be called the Cin House than a present the same seven children, all boys. In the early part of seven children, all boys. In the carly part of the Cin-House than a present the same be he ine 28th inst, or their estimates will not be the war two of these enlisted and served with Buell in Kentucky. One of them, the eldest, Ezra, died of exposure in camp, and his brother Thomas soon afterward suffered an amputation of the right leg from injuries received in a cavalry skirmish. These casualties operated upon Mrs. Eastwick's mind to such a degree that she lost ad fortitude and presence of mind, and sat during whole days weeping and full of forebodings Awong her premonitions was a curious one that ber third con, Stark, would die in battle. As the war advanced and conscription began, Mrs.

Hast min's fears grew intense. Finally the first draft came, the State had all ed its quote in almost every district, and Stark promised his mother that under no circumstances would he go to the field. But a second draft being projected the mother's excitement augment

She endeavored to persuade her son to leave the country and make a voyage to sea. He endeavored to pacify her, and left home for a time. On his return, finding her in the same melancholy frame of mind, he threatened, in jest, if she made further reference to the matter, to enlist volunta rily. Mrs Eastwick, doubtless laboring under some hailucination, seems now to have resolved upon the sad act of mutilating her sen so that he should not be accepted for military service. She Land, No. of scress and value in 1850; slaves, No., sex and age; horses, mules, asses and jamets; cattle, he slept upon a lounge, and the optick nerve was No and value; sheep, goats, hogs, ootton weel tobases, destroyed without more than momentary pain to destroyed without more than momentary pain to young Mr. Eastwick. He is now entirely blind. Indiana Banner.

One Good Turn Descrees Another .- A tinker was traveling in the country, and having traversed many miles without finding anything to do, he stopped weary and hungry, at a tavorn. he get into conversation with a glazier, to whom he related his troubles. The latter sympathised with him deeply, and telling him he should have a job before long, advised him to go to his dinner and cat heartily. The tinker took his advice, ate his fill, and when he returned to the bar room he was overjoyed to hear that the landlord required is services to mend a lot of pans and kettles, which had suddenly "sprang aleak." The tinker at once fell to work, accomplished the task, and received a liberal sum therefor, and started on his way rejoicing. Upon reaching the outside of the house, he found the glazier, who said: "Well, you see I told the truth. I procured you a job of work. and how do you think I accomplished it?" "I am Received another of these Excellent Mills, iron Those failing to comply with the above notice to list oure I cannot tell you," rejoined the tinker rollers and iron boxes, for sele at Manufecturer's their property, &c. will be held as defaulters, and their "You told me you were weary, hungry and penniless. I knew the landlord was well off and doing a good business, so I watched the oppor thanks, and a heart full of gratitude, resumed his journey, but he had not preceded many yards before he reached the village church, when a brilliant idea struck him. The glasier had befriended him-he would befriend the glazier. The church he thought could afford to bear a alight loss in a good cause, so taking a position where he could not be seen, he riddled every window in the edifice with stones; and then, highly clated with his exploits, he retraced his steps to notify the glazier he would speedily have a vary important job.

He met the glazier at the door of the tavern "Sir," said he, "I am happy to inform you that fortune has enabled me to return the kindness I received from you an hour since." "How so? asked the glazier, pleasantly. "I have broken every pane of glass in the church," answered the tinker, "and you, of course. will be employed to put them in again." The glazier's jaw fell, and his face assumed a blank expression, as he said in a tremuleus voice, "You don't mean that, do you?" "Certainly," replied the tinker; "there isn't a whole pane of glass in the building. One good turn deserves another, you know." answered the glazier, in utter despair, "but you infernal secundrol, you have ruined me, for I keep the church windows in repair by the year!"

Halting between two Opinions .- A writer in the Montgomery Mail furnishes the following

A yankee "bold soldier" having crept up behind a tree rather close to our works at Cold Harber, was discovered by our boys, who brought some dozen daugerous looking muzzels to bear on him and ordered him to "come in." Yaok hesitoole and implements, and all tools of mechanics and tated; "bang, bang," the dirt and bark of the tree was kacaked about his ears. He sew he was "in others, musical instruments and all articles of domestic was knocked about his cars. He saw he was "in use No. and value of wagons, carts, drays and all u tight," and so concluded to come in, for which other vehicles on wheels. Value of all gold and silver purpose he laid down his gun. Seeing his ob ware and plate, jewelry and watches. Value of icon his yearless brethren heren to fice on him all books, maps pistures paintings, statuary and other levels of act. All property and success of basis, joint this changed his mind and he started back to

Yank quickly came to a halt, perhaps to weigh the chances, both sides hallooing for him to come to tham. Wisely deciding the rebs were the most bills of exphange on foreign countries. Value of all dangerous markemen, he turned and started for orlicles of personal or mixed property not embraced in them at something a little above a double-quick. The whole vankee line fired on him; but despite of seventy-five pards of open field and three tumbles which he took in the race, he reached our lines in sefety, with an almost breathless 'Christ A'mighty! how yure fellows shoot! He said he had been a seaman until recently, and gave his name as Sinbad the Sailor. Doubtless his advent into the rebel lines will compare favorably with some of the adventures of the hero of the Arabian
