It has been largely used by the Railreads in Virginia and North Carolina and fully answers all the purposes of the most expensive oils heretofore used. NORTHERN PEACE MOVEMENTS

The Richmend Examiner concludes from all indications at the North, that the yankees are much more intent upon peace than the Confeder-

One thing at least is plain, that they are all looking for an early peace, hoping for it, contriving some device for compassing it. They had flattered themselves that the re election of Lincoln would be the virtual end of the Confederacy: and new that the great blow has been struck, and nothing has come of it, they are almost at their wit's end to find some other way out of the bad business. Peace they must have, that is peace with the submission of the South: they had made themselves believet tha this consummation was fairly due to them at about the present date; and that the re-election of their War President was to be the sure signal of that happy event. If it do not some about that way, they feel certain that it must some some other way. They need it: Fates. Peace is quite as imperative a necessifier them as for us; and much more so;—only the cannot bring themselves to take the only means by which they will ever see it with their eyes. They know well that their country cannot bear the strain of another four years' war; and they abhor the thought of such a task, or "job," as Lincoln calls it: but they abhor even more (just at present) the thought of acknowledging the existence of the Confederate States or Government. Here is a difficulty: and unless see extricate them it is a difficulty that must ripen into their ruin.

"Is there one single Confederate so idiotic as to believe that they would now be so anxious for peace but that they are conscious of inability to carry on the war with success? Is it because they love us that they think of inviting us back to their fraternal arms? In truth, the whole tone of the Northern Press since their election, brings us the pleasing assurance that they are brings us the pleasing assurance that they are frightened at the prospect of undertaking over again, and beginning once more at the beginning, such a "job." as they have found so heavy on their hands these last four years. If by any amount of bullying, cheating, lying, bribery and intrigue, they can now bring about distraction of our counsels and desertion of our alliance by one State here and another there, then they think they are still saved. And the obvious lesson which, if we are rational beings, and not cowards, we must learn from the movements of our enewe must learn from the movements of our enemies, is that we should now, beyond all times, show an united front, and a resolute determina-

Marrying the Wrong Lady -The following is a love story brought to light recently by proceedings in the German law courts:

Vienna has been stirred up lately by the comical result of a strange love story. It seems that, in the house of one Herr Kuhune, a teacher of languages, Dr. Kant, a young lawyer, happened to make the acquaintance of a lady, burdened with some property and thirty years. The lady, She made love to him-in fact, very strongly-6. Correspondents recommend them as good for Livand persuaded him to visit her at her house. But alas! he loved another lady. One evening, while conversing with the Doctor, she said: "Why, conversing with the Doctor, she said: "Why, with your favorable idea of matrimony may I ask if you ever thought of marrying yourself?" Dr. Kant sighed, and, his eyes resting on the ground hesitatingly muttered in reply: "I have already thought of marrying, and made my choice, but "But!" the lady hastly interposed. "But," he continued, "the lady is rich, very rich, and I am poor. I am afraid I could hardly aspire to her hand; and rather than allow myself to be taxed with sordid designs, I will bury my passion in my breast and leave it unavowed forever.'

At an early hour the following day, she, however, botook herself to a solicitor, and, in legal form, declared her wish to present and hand over. as his property, the sum of 150,000 guilders (£150,000) to Dr. Kant. When the document had been signed and duly completed, she sat down in the office, and, enclosing it in an elegant envelope, added a note to the following effect: "Dear Sir: I have much pleasure in enclosing paper, which I hope will remove the obstacle in the way of your marriage. Believe me, etc., "ALICE MARTINI' Dr. Kant-for he and no other was the addressed-was the happiest man in the world on receiving this generous epistle Repairing at once to the parents of Fraulien Fischel, the lady of his love, he proposed for, and received, the nand of a girl who had been long flattered by his delicate, though unavowed, intentions. His reply to Fraulien Martini, besides conveying his sincere thanks, contained two cartes de visite, linked togeta r by the significant rose colored ribbon. Miss Martini forthwith sued the happy bridegroom for restitution, but as no promise of marriage had been made, the case was, by two successive courts, decided against her.

The Lady's Repentance.—In the life of Dr. Raffles, just published, the following story was told in connection with a preaching journey in 1814. On our way from Wem to Hawkestons we passed a house, of which Mr. Lee told me the following occurrences: "A young lady, the daughter of the owner of the house, was addressed by a man, who, though agreeable to her, was disliked by her father. Of course he would not consent to their union, and she determined to elope. The night was fixed, the hour came, he placed the ladder to the window, and in a few minutes she was in his arms. They mounted a double horse. and were soon at som distance from the house.

After a while the day broke silence by saying: "Well, you see what a proof I have given you of my affection; I hope you will make me a good in Reckingham on the third architage of actions and answered the petition, the same will be taken potentians and heard experts as to them.

Witness, Louis H. Webb. Clerk of our said Court, at office, the third Monday of Oct. 1834. husband." He was a surly fellow, and gruffly Turner, corner of Fayetteville and Newbern streets. Persons visiting the city on business ere invited to eall ca him. THOS. BRANCH & SON.
