Mr. Pennington has all his life been a warm and zealous advocate of the principles of the Whig party. As long as that party maintained a distinct under its banner. Since its dissolution, he has acted with the Opposition of his State for the purpose of defeating the Democratic party. Upon the subject of slavery, he holds the same views that are held by the more moderate and conservative menull over the North. He is in favor of the execution of the Fugitive Slave Law and opposed to its repeal. Of all things keep dough-faced men from high places. We want men in power who will take decided positions, and we prefer an open, frank, bold enemy, any time, to a milk-and-water monstrosity, who is neither friend nor enemy, of him self, but who is weak enough and knave enough to lend himself to the execution of the purposes of corrupt cliques. We are dicidedly of the opinion that the election of Sherman would have been better for the country and better for the South, than that of Pennington, the present Speaker. Then we should have had an open enemy and should have known how to meet him, and might, at least, been spared the mortification of hearing him praised by a portion of the South- bill by nearly a unanimous vote. The bill was ern press. The most alarming feature in our present political condition is the want of firmness exhibited by southern men, and symptoms of a disposition on the part of some to submit quietly last. to all the indignities which Abolition fanaticism | Various bills were introduced on various submay heap upon us.
