to have a centennial celebration Philadelphia, on the fourth of July 1876, we were disposed to favor the project for several reasons, and expressed the hope that our State would be represented.

North Carolina did her full part in the Revolutionary war, and was as much entitled to rejoice over the completion of a century from the date of the declaration of Independence as any other State. But aside from the commemorative features of the occasion, it was proposed that all the States have on exhibition at the Centennial, specimens of their natural resources and development, and also the evidences of their progress in the useful arts, in order to show to the world the greatness and wealth of our country, and the advancement she has made in the arts and sciences in the course of one hundred

This is all well enough and highly commendable. But the Centennial Committee having the matter in charge. are now soliciting pecuniary aid from Congress. This of itself is a little suspicious, but if we investigate the plans and purposes of the Committee we are inclined to think the whole affair is a money-making project, to make patriotism tributary to the schemes of Yankee enterprise and cunning and to enrich certain individuals while the world is gazing in admiration and awe at the wooderful exhibition of American progress, power and glory !

'The Centennial Exhibition is an incorporated joint stock company, and the object of the corporators seems to be to so manage the affair as to make the stock pay handsome dividends. The bonds to the amount of ten millions of dollars are to be issued in shares of ten dollars. This amount is to be used in providing suitable buildings and grounds for the exhibition, and to detray other expenses incident thereto, and the stock-holders are to receive the dividends, if any, to be derived from the proceeds of every source of profit connected with the celebration. O course the principal revenue would be derived from the admission and entrance fees, but numberless schemes will be invented to yield money to the managers and to compel the striotic visitors from all sections of theh Union to contribute their mite, in son Pirm or other, to sell the grand aggregate of cash receipts, so as to not only to ndemnify the stock-holders against all loss, but to make the investment a profitable onc.

From the lights before us, we incline to the opinion that the Centennial Exhibition is somewhat after the style of Gilmore's grand musical concert at Bos ton, intended for individual emolument and profit. In this view, the patriotic object is subordinated to mercenar motive, and the desire for gain sup plants and over-rides all noble impulses.

We do not know whether Congress will make an appropriation or not in behalf of the Centennial, but we think the people who pay the taxes of the country will object very seriously to contributing the public treasure in aid of an individual enterprise, where the profits go into the pockets of the shareholders. With greater propriety, Congress might donate large sums to build Railroads for the benefit of private stockholders, because Railroads are beneficial to the sections through which they pass, and are great conveniences to the traveling public.

We are in hopes that the suspicions which have been excited against the managers of the Centennial Exhibition may prove unfounded, and that after all, the United States may have an exhibition at Philadelphia that will be creditable to the nation and to each and every State of the American Union.

RESIDENT LINCOLN'S POSI-

TION ON EMANCIPATION. The colored men of this city celebrated the tenth anniversary of the emancipation proclamation at Metropolitan Hall vesterday.

It is natural that those who were formerly slaves should rejoice that they are now free, and that they should commemorate the day of their liberation.

On the first day of January, 1863, the emancipation proclamation of Abraham Lincoln, then President of the United States, went into effect. It is right and proper that those upon whom the boon of freedom was conferred by that iemarkable proclamation take part in the ceremonies of the emancipation anni-

We stated that Mr. Bates, of Missouri, favored the proclamation provided it was coupled with deportation-that is, that the colored men should be sent from the country, on the ground that the white and to dress his only daughter.

black races could not live and thrive in social proximity.

According to Mr. Welles, who attended the meeting and who was at that time Secretary of the Navy, President Lancoln concurred in Mr

Bates' views in regard to the incompatibility of the races. We presume no one, will doubt Mr. Welles' statement. He is a Republican after the straightest sect, and can have no motive in misrepresenting the views of Mr. Lincoln.

In corroboration of Mr. Welles' statement that Lincoln desired a separation of the races, our attention has been called to the following speech to the negroes, made by him, on the fourteenth of July, 1862, several weeks preceding his proclamation: "I hold that the white and black races cannot dwell together." "I urge all intelligent colored men to exert themselves for colonization. I suggest Central America as the place. colored race. We know that the memory of Mr. reverence and justly so; but if Southern man should propose to send the negroes to Central America or any other foreign land, he would be denounced as the enemy of the colored race and be regarded as a monster of heartlessness and cruelty.
