BAPTIST FAIR .- As per announcement, the Baptist Fair opened last evening at Tucker Hall. In truth the arrangement of the room presented a scene beautiful in every way. The decorations of the Hall and tables were such as only a refined feminine taste Business letters may be addressed could give birth to. Aside from all the ethereal attractions the eyes of the matter-of-fact were taken up with the array of substantials, Sweet hams, fat turkeys, well flavored ducks, lucious oysters and delicate chicken salad, &c., were spread in a profusion and served in a style which would carry out the idea of the most Hospitable, and pander to the taste of the most fastidious epicure. The Fair will continue for one or two days. During the day meals can be obtained at the Hall.

A young lady of that place was beloved by a young man cotto engaged in business in New York City, day. and an engagement entered into. The days glided happily on. Life to them, was divested of its realities and none of its asperities came to the surface.-Through the mechinations of Cupid a garb of roseate hues was weaved with The employers seem to be unanimous which to clothe almost every incident | in opposition to the reduction of hours, of their lives. The day was named upon which they thought, feeling and desire. The expectant and happy groom purchased of love winged his flight from the great | sentence. metropolis to the quiet and rural town of Fayetteville. Without accident he soon reposed himself within its precincts. To say that he was happy would be to utter a platitude. His felicity was of the gushing order .-Oak Grove-B. Y. Rogers, J. P., S. J. He longed to make others a , sharer in his bliss. He sought out some companions of summers equal to his own, and in their appreciative ears poured his tale of requited love. Here, unfortunately to relate, Bacchus began to dispute the sway of Cupid and the liquid homage at the shrine of this thirsty divinity became deep and continuous. According to plain Anglo-Saxon, the party got very particularly and unmistakbly drunk. The lady heard of the debauch just as she had covered her wealth of golden hair with the paying dividends on fraudulently issued long and fleecy bridal veil. In an in- stock, and appointing a committee to BULK SIDE, MESS PORK, LARD, stant her resolve was made. She determined that the man who could so far forget what was due to her as to mingle a bacchanalian revel with the holy and solemn services of the marri- of the Great Eastern Circus was blown her. Appeal after appeal was made to alter her determination, but to no purpose. In her resolution she was as fixed and as unmovable as the mountains. The would-be-groom sadly took his departure, and let us indulge the hope that he left a better and wiser man. Back to the rush and throng of the great city he betook himself, and sought to forget his sorrow by giving his undivided attention to his avocation. Months rolled on until nearly another year was numbered among those that were, and not one word had been exchanged between these parted lovers. Now here comes in the ro mance with which we have to-ornament this simple tale. The lady by accident visited New York, and the goundam lover by accident found out she was there, and by accident they were thrown together. The old love in their bosoms had not been entirely extinguished, and that was required to blow the sparks into a living and irresistable flames. Pardon was implored and granted, and an immediate recourse to the Priest was had, and the two were blended into that long desired oneness. Though the above may not contain anything with which to "adorn a tale," yet that it "points a moral" is unmista-

PHILADELPHIA, March 11.-At the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Rail road Directors a report was read, giving a highly encouraging state of the present and of the future prospects of the company. With the acceptance by the stockholders of the act of the Legislature, recently passed, authorizing the doubling of the capital of the company, a greater and more rapid extension than ever of the facilities of the road will be practicable, and its managers will be able to consummate their great scheme for making the road the highway of the continent for travel and traffic. With an increase of capital the company will be placed in possession of the means for laying two additional tracks between this city and Pittsburg, so that devolved upon me to express to you it will have in operation four tracks, two to be used for through and two for local traffic.
