While the performance was going on at the Stadt theatre the gas was suddenly extinguished and the audience left in utter darkness.

In Brooklyn, gas strikes are also threatened.

THE ONLY CHILD SAVED.

The only child saved from the Atlantic was a little boy named John Hen-Queenstown, one of the survivors. The boy cried out through the port hole for assistance-saying that his father, the error in reckoning the position of drowned.

When young Henley met his sister at Castle Garden on Sunday morningthe day the survivors reached New York, the meeting is represented as having been of the most affecting character-many of the bystanders were proaching a low, sandy shore moved to tears.

On account of the sad death of his parents and his own miraculous escape, Henley's case elicited profound sympathy among the thousands gathered to witness the landing of the survivors in New York.
