BURNING OF THE OLD CAPITOL.

From the Raleigh Register and North Carolina Gazette, June 23, 1831, we take the following account of the destruction of the old Capitol:

"A fearful Conflagration! It is our painful and melancholy duty again to announce to the public, another appalling instance of loss by fire, which will be deeply felt and lamented by every individual in our State. It is nothing less than the total destruction of the Capitol of the State, located in this city! Of that noble edifice, with its splendid decorations, nothing now remains but the blackened walls and smouldering ruins! The State Library is also entirely consumed, and the statue of Washington, that proud monument of national gratitude, which was our pride and glory, is so mitigated and defaced, that none behold it but with mournful feelings, and the conviction involuntarily forces itself upon their minds that the loss is one which cannot be repaired. The most active exertions were made to rescue this chief d'oeuvre of Canova from the ravages of the devouring element, nor were they desisted from until the danger became imminent.

The alarm was given about 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning, and it was precisely evident that all attempts to extinguish the fire would prove perfectly fruitless. The efforts of the bystanders were then directed towards the protection of the Public Offices on the square, and the adjacent private buildings, and the preservation of the official archives. We are happy to add, that none of the former were injured, and that the latter, including the Legislative records, were all saved.

The beautiful grove of oaks, of which the Capitol was the centre ornament, did more towards staying the progress of the flames than any human effort, and incalculates most forcibly the propriety of cultivating shade trees in cities, on the score of the security from fire alone, to say nothing of other considerations. Soldiers has the eye witnessed so awful a spectacle as this vast building in one concentrated blaze, streaming from every window and a vast column from the roof, forming altogether a scene not adequately to be described.

The origin of the fire is not certainly known, but we believe the general impression is, that it was the result of a most culpable carelessness on the part of a man who had been employed to assist in soldering the new zinc roof, as he was seen that morning carrying up a coil of fire between two shingles considerably ignited, a spark from which, in all probability, fell amongst some combustible matter between the roof and ceiling, which took fire while the hands were at breakfast.

Considering the rapidity with which the fire progressed, it is an alleviating circumstance that all the public papers were all secured. Besides the papers of the Legislature, and those of the Comptroller and of the clerk of the Supreme Court, the fine copy of Stewart's Painting of the Architecture of the Legislative Chambers were preserved from the flames.

It will be seen from the accompanying resolution, that the congregation and pew-holders of the Presbyterian Church, with laudable public spirit, have tendered to the Governor the use of their buildings for the temporary accommodation of the Legislature.

"RALEIGH, 21st June, 1831. At a meeting of the Congregation and Pew-holders of the Presbyterian Church in this city, the Rev. William McPheeters was called to the Chair, and H. M. Miller, Esq., was requested to act as Secretary.

The meeting taking into consideration the very distressing calamity with which the city of Raleigh, and the State generally, has this day been visited in the destruction by fire, of that noble edifice, the State House, which was the chief ornament of the State, adopted unanimously, the following resolution:

Resolved, That they do hereby respectfully offer to His Excellency, the Governor of North Carolina, and through him to the General Assembly of the State, this Church with the session house attached, as a temporary accommodation for holding the sessions of that honorable body until a more convenient and permanent building shall be provided.

Resolved, That should any alteration in said church be deemed advisable for the better accommodation of the members of the Assembly, that they do hereby allow and authorize said alteration to be made.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing resolutions, signed by the Chairman and countersigned by the Secretary, be handed to His Excellency, the Governor.

WILLIAM MCPHEETERS, Chm. H. M. MILLER, Secretary.

We also learn that the use of the Session House of the Presbyterian Church has been politely offered to the Judges and Bar of the Supreme Court at present in session, and the offer has been thankfully accepted.

In the evening of the day on which the conflagration took place, His Excellency, the Governor, caused an examination to be made of John M. Mason, John Bell and William (an apprentice of Mason) persons who had been at work on the roof of the Capitol that morning, soldering the heads of nails which fastened down the zinc—in order, if possible, to come at the origin of the fire. No one, it is believed, who heard this examination, can doubt that the destruction which has taken place, was caused by the careless use of fire by said workmen between five and seven o'clock that morning.

In its next issue the Register says further: The opinion then expressed, as to the origin of the fire, is still entertained, though there is some doubt whether it was communicated by a spark from the burning shingles which were proved to have been carried upon the roof that morning, or was caused by the hot used for preparing the solder having become so heated as to melt the zinc, and therewith ignite the wooden sheathing which the top of the house was covered. From one of these causes it must have proceeded. The building was entirely consumed in about two hours from the period at which the alarm was given. The walls were left standing, but a part of them have since tumbled down. Indeed such seems to have been their original precarious construction, that many believe, had not the Capitol been burnt they would at no distant day have given away from the pressure of their own weight, and perhaps have involved a serious loss of human life in this fall.

Since the fire, efforts have been made, and with success, to exume the fragments of the statue, which were broken off by the falling timbers and buried beneath the ruins. We are pleased to add, that the head has been recovered, having received but slight injury; also one arm and one leg are nearly perfect. The remaining portion of the statue exhibits, however, such a tendency to crumble, that we fear its dijecta membra can never again be made to adhere.

Nothing was saved from the Library, nor could any attempt for that purpose be made, by reason of the suffocating smoke which filled the room. It was in his infancy, and the loss can easily be repaired with one or two exceptions. We allude to the collection of our old Legislative Journals, brought down in almost unbroken succession from the year 1775, to the present day. Lawson's History of the State, valuable only however, for its antiquity, was also burnt. This is a very thin quarto, which was purchased by the State at the sale of a private library, a few years since for about $70.

Our public officers, particularly the Secretary of State and Comptroller, have an Herculean task to perform in rearing to order the chaotic confusion into which their papers have been thrown. The documents belonging to the Clerks of the two Houses and some of the Comptroller's papers are mixed with those of the Secretary of State; and the attempt therefore, to hunt up at present any particular record, would be merely as hopeless a task as to look for a needle in a haystack.

Upon a review of all the circumstances connected with this unfortunate affair, it is no more than an act of justice in us to say, that so far as we have had an opportunity of consulting public opinion, the sympathy of the community is strongly elicited in behalf of the enterprising conductor, Mr. Briggs. The entire work would have been finished the day after the accident happened, and his contract had been fully complied with. Indeed, he had done all that it was his peculiar province to superintend, ten days before, and was only waiting to have the zinc dials soldered to give up the work to the Commissioners.

Such a desire has been discovered amongst the numerous individuals who have visited the ruins, to obtain pieces of the State for preservation, that it has been found necessary to enclose it, so as to prevent further mutilation.

A SAD AFFAIR.—We give below the following particulars of a very sad affair which occurred in Atlanta, Ga., on the 16th inst. The Mr. Jones alluded to, is from what we can gather from the Petersburg, Va., and other papers, the same gentleman who recently conducted a drug business in this city in partnership with Mr. Dopp, though the initials are given wrong. Mr. Jones has many warm friends in this city, who will sincerely regret to hear of the great calamity which has befallen him. The Atlanta Herald of the 16th inst. says: "About nine o'clock last night Atlanta was startled by a rumor that two or three men had been poisoned by mistake at Heard, Craig & Co.'s drug store, and that they were dying or dead. Upon investigation, we found that yesterday about half-past five o'clock, Dr. J. W. Craig and Judge Thomas Pullum, two members of the firm of Heard, Craig & Co., had gone into the cellar of their store to take an evening toddy, Judge Pullum complaining that he was feeling unwell. When they reached the cellar, Mr. J. F. Jones the head pharmacist, who was working down in the laboratory, proposed to fix them up "an extra nice drink." They consented to his proposition, and chatted away easily until he announced that the punch was ready. They then partook of it, and Dr. Craig drinking more heartily than Judge Pullum. They then returned up stairs, and in about thirty minutes discovered, from violent symptoms, that something was wrong with them. They ascribed it to the drinks they had taken, and upon investigation found that by mistake a large quantity of acetic acid, a most fatal poison, had been mixed in their toddy. The symptoms increased in violence, nothing appearing to give relief, until at half past nine o'clock, Dr. Craig died in great agony, leaving Judge Pullum barely hovering between life and death.

Dr. Craig was poisoned at half-past five, and died precisely at half-past nine. He had a very hard death, indeed, screaming all the time as it is intense agony, and frothing at the mouth plentifully. His eyes were very much dilated, and every nerve seemed strung up almost to snapping. He seemed to be unconscious of everything around him, and kept shrieking, "Oh! what a horrible death to die—what a terrible death!" At one time he was conscious, I think. He begged very piteously for his mother—kept calling "Mother!" and saying, "I want to see her—I am going to die!"

W. H. BARNES, Esq.—We are gratified to learn that this gentleman, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of I. O. O. F., of Georgia, now editor of the Heart and Hand in New York City, will deliver his lecture, "Entertaining an Audience," in this on the evening of the 21st prox., at Tucker Hall. It was first thought that Mr. Barnes could not visit us, but we are glad to know that he will be with us at the time above mentioned.

OBITUARY. Died, very suddenly, in this city on the 18th inst., MRS. EMERANCE A. YANCEY, in the 33rd year of her age. She was a daughter of George and Lacey Gooden, of North Carolina, who died many years since. Her death took place at the residence of her sister, Mrs. E. Moore, where she had gone to seek a more experienced medical advice than her own home afforded. Although it is but natural for us to grieve, when God, in His mysterious providence, calls upon us to give up our dear and most deeply cherished friends—and, indeed, especially do we feel the blow when a mother is taken from her children; yet sometimes, in His mercy, He prepares our minds for the great change, by so many tokens of His unbounded love and great goodness, that we almost feel prepared for it. His summons to the deceased, although awfully sudden—so sudden indeed as to spare her the ordinary pang of parting from her children, and near relatives—yet found her not unprepared. Possessed with personal beauty, and with a bright and winning disposition, she found warm friends among every circle of her acquaintance. Endowed with a high sense of honor and with strict moral principles; with a nature most keenly alive to the sufferings and misfortunes of others, and her youthful days watched out by pious parents, she early made her peace with God, and was a devoted lover of Him and His word; her faith recognizing through all her afflictions, and they were more than usually real to the soul of man, the Hand of an ever loving Father; her ever-counseling thought being, his goodness in giving his own son to die for us, and believing, that with Him, He would freely give us all things. Her husband will live after her, and will be cherished by her family as one of the greatest blessings which God can bestow on her family.
