The published report that the Court of Claims has decided that the cotton tax is unconstitutionalis incorrect. The question of the constitutionality of the law imposing the tax on cotton has never yet been before this Court, although it will probably be raised in the argument of a case at the next term. This report may have arisen from the fact that the Court of Claims decided long ago, and has uniformly held in a number of cases since, that the cotton tax was not a charge npon the captured and abandoned property fund, or in other words, that the government could not retain this tax from the proceeds of sales of captured cotton
