SERIOUS DAMAGE TO THE CROPS. THE FRESHET IN THE TAR.

The Roanoke on the Rampage. DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.

Effects of the Inundation.

From every section of the State gloomy accounts reach us concerning Nathaniel Curtis, Esq., one of the earliest trophies of Washingtonianism, the devastations caused by the heavy freshets in our rivers, their disastrous destructions of property, &c., &c.

From the East, West and central counties, we hear the same reports, and it is beyond our power to form any idea of the hundreds of thousands dollars of private property which have been destroyed. From an intelligent gentleman who reached this city from Louisburg yesterday, we learn that the classic Tar has been cutting some fantastic capers, and has been overflowing its banks to such an extent as to carry dismay to the hearts of the farmers who vainly imagined that they could this year reap

All the Scotland Neck plantations, lying in the vicinity of the river, came in for their share of the disaster. At Hill's Ferry, on the plantation formerly owned by Maj. John Devereux, of this city, the dwelling was raised four teet and a half above the ground. The stock on the plantation were saved by being taken in the house and kept on the first floor, while the in mates sought protection on the second floor. One vast expanse of water spread > from the Ferry to the highlands, a distance of several miles, between which points not a foot of land was visible. What effects this tremendous deluge will have upon the crops cannot of course with certainty be predicted, but the farmers are low-spirited and gloomy, and some of them have > almost despaired of doing anything. They certainly, have some cause for despondency; but the Roanoke farmers are not the men to give way in the midst of untoward calamities, and we trust they will strive to make the best of their unfortunate situation.

From the West, the accounts are equally as distressing. The Yadkın has been higher than at any time since 1825, and hay, oats, corn, fodder, livestock and houses have been floated down its swollen current, while the growing crops of wheat, rye oats and corn have been sadly and in some instances irretrievably damaged.
