

THE PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

Col. D. Wyatt Aiken, of South Carolina, Deputy for the National Grange of the Patrons of Industry, delivered an address in the Court House in this city on Thursday last, in advocacy of the claims of this new organization.

The address was an able and interesting one, and was listened to with deep interest. Col. Aiken is a pleasant and entertaining speaker. He explained the origin, purposes and advantages of Farmers' Granges, and answered many objections which had been urged against them. He said it was a purely agricultural association—intended solely for the protection of the farmers, and was in no sense political. Its chief aim was to advance the agricultural interests of the country by bringing the farmers frequently together, and thus binding them in sympathy and unity of action, and enabling them to receive the benefits of friendly intercourse, combined effort and mutual assistance.

The social features of the Granges are advantageous. The farmers as a class, especially in the South, need more intercourse among themselves. Something practical could be learned from the most ignorant farm laborer. In a conversation between any two farmers for one hour, it was a rare thing if one or the other did not receive some new information or a new idea. The Granges served as agricultural clubs in each neighborhood, where valuable information was received and imparted; and thus the social features were not only useful in promoting friendly meetings and cementing kind feelings, but were of great advantage in the circulation of practical hints for the cultivation of the soil.

The order of the Patrons of Husbandry was not a political organization. It had no connection with Mr. Pool's new party, the Workingmen's Labor Union. It never inquired into a man's political views, and when a member came into the meeting, he came as a farmer, and not as a politician, lawyer, doctor, mechanic or minister, or anything else. It is no more political than the Masons, the Odd-Fellows, or the churches. The members were not required to vote for a candidate because he is a member of the order. There is no more obligation resting upon a member of the Farmers' Granges to support a brother member for an office than upon a member of the church to vote for a candidate who happens to belong to his denomination.

The admission of females to membership had been urged as an objection. But this was an important feature in elevating the order and keeping the men decent and well-behaved. No man would be ashamed of any organization of which his wife was a member. The presence of ladies would exercise a pure and refining influence, and would insure decorum and good deportment. Besides, women were frequently managers of farms, and are of course, as deeply interested as men, in whatever concerns the agricultural interests of the country. Such women will be directly benefited in various ways by becoming members, and the advantages of the order should be extended to them. If men always allowed their wives and daughters to accompany them, there will be no danger of their going into disreputable society.

The secrecy of the Granges has been objected to by some. There is very little secret about the order—just enough to make it permanent and give it compactness and strength. If the Masons and Odd Fellows were to open their doors to the public and remove the mystic ties that bind them together, their influence for good would be at once at an end, and the lodges would soon disband and dissolve. The secrecy of the Granges is on the same principle that merchants have their private cost mark. If a merchant would tell his customers the cost of every article of merchandise, he would not be able to effect many sales. The customers would go to another store and probably pay a larger profit unwittingly for the same articles. The secrecy of the Granges is necessary, as it is in Masonry and Odd Fellowship, to bind the farmers together in brotherhood, to insure concert of action, and to give consistency and permanency to the organization.

The order is a benevolent one. Instances were given where the Granges gave pecuniary aid and assistance to the members who had suffered any misfortunes. In South Carolina, where a member lost nearly all his property by fire, the local Grange contributed largely to relieve him, and started him to work again. Its pecuniary advantages were very great. By purchasing at wholesale any articles of merchandise, they could usually be bought at a reduced price. The principle on which the Granges operated enable them always to purchase at wholesale prices. The members could club together and buy their farming implements directly from the manufacturer. A plough which is retailed at ten dollars, could be purchased for nine, at the wholesale price. Col. Aiken stated that he had himself saved one hundred dollars in the purchase of an engine, because of his membership in the Grange. A member of a Grange wanted an article for his farm; he would consult his brother members, and find out that several of them wanted the same article; they would club together, and send direct to the manufacturer or wholesale dealer, and thus be enabled to get it at a greatly reduced price. He said in this way, he had known farmers to send for mules and save twenty-five dollars on each animal.

By this means, the system of middlemen and commission merchants was dispensed with. Instead of paying profits to agents, who came to the farmer's house to sell a machine or any farming implement, the farmer himself reaped the profit by dealing directly with headquarters. On the same principle commission merchants were discarded. The speaker gave an instance where the members of the Grange united their crops of cotton to the amount of ten thousand bales and shipped to one man, who agreed to sell it for 1 per cent commission—thus saving two per cent on the regular charge of a commission merchant. The same thing could be done everywhere, and thus the farmers of the country could be saved the two per cent commission that now goes into the hands of commission merchants.

These were only a few of the advantages of the order. The speaker would not tell all, as it would be improper—the secrecy forbidding. He said it was a little remarkable that the farmers alone of all other classes were at the mercy of buyers. The merchants set their own price on their property. If you do not choose to pay their price it is all right. Professional men set their own value on their services. The lawyer, not the client, would say how much he should have as a fee in any case. The physician, not the patient, would make his own charge for his services and medicine. And so on through every profession and trade. But when your farmer had cotton for sale, he would bring it to Raleigh, and let the buyer fix a price for him. He was in the power of his customer, and instead of dictating his own terms, relied entirely on the man who is interested in making a profit out of his labor. This ought not to be, and it is time the farmer was becoming more independent and self-assertive.

We have given this synopsis, which is written from memory alone, not with the view of reporting Col. Aiken's speech, but to give our readers some idea of the principles of the new movement among the farmers, which is so popular in the North West, and is destined to extend all over the country. We think the organization is calculated to be of great service to the farming community, provided it can be continued on the basis now claimed for it by Col. Aiken. Its purposes are commendable and they seem practicable. If the society can be kept aloof from politics and will not be made an instrument for the promotion of ambitious and dangerous men, it may prove of great service to the country.

There are some objections to the formation of Granges on the plan proposed, which we will refer to hereafter. CERTIFICATE OF MERIT. We have been shown the certificate of merit awarded to Miss Bell, of Washington, N. C., at Cooper Institute, New York, on the first of May, for skill in drawing. Miss Bell at the same time also received one of the three silver medals of the Trustees for artistic work. She had been at the Institute only three or four months, and bore off the honors in a school of over seven hundred pupils, some of whom had received instruction two and three years. The certificate is neatly engraved on parchment, and is tastefully adorned with blue ribbon which borders the right and left sides, with a bow in the centre of the left. The parchment contains an engraving of the handsome Cooper Institute building: "COOPER UNION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE AND ART. FOUNDED A. D. 1853. WHATSOEVER THINGS ARE TRUE. THIS IS TO CERTIFY THAT MOLLIE BELL HAS ATTENDED THE COURSE OF INSTRUCTION GIVEN DURING THE TERM OF 1873 IN DRAWING, IN THE FEMALE SCHOOL OF ART OF THIS INSTITUTION, AND AFTER AN EXAMINATION HAS BEEN AWARDED A CERTIFICATE OF THE FIRST GRADE." SUSAN N. CARTER, Director. PETER COOPER, PRESIDENT. [SEAL.] NEW YORK, May 1st, 1873.

A certificate of the first grade is granted for very superior ability and diligent attention; a certificate of the second grade for ability and diligent attention; and a certificate of the third grade for attention and good conduct.

TO OUR EXCHANGES. We have received a number of letters of inquiry from our exchanges, asking us what course we intend to pursue in regard to the new postage law, which goes into effect on the first of July. We do not wish to cut off any of the State papers from our exchange list, and will continue to send them the News unless we receive some intimation that our paper is not desired. We do not feel willing to dispense with any of our North Carolina contemporaries; as we make use of them all in getting up our State items, and we trust that our State exchange list will continue unbroken.

We will, however, be compelled to discontinue a number of our exchanges published out of the State, and to them notification will be given.

BILLON—If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, despondent, have frequent headaches, mouth tastes badly in morning, irregular appetite and long coated, you are suffering from Torpid Liver or "Biliousness." In many cases of "Liver Complaint" or "Biliousness," a remedy for all such cases, Dr. F. J. Beckwith's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal. It effects perfect cures, leaving the system strengthened and healthy. Sold by all first class druggists.

How unnecessary the anguish, distress, neuralgia, toothache and carache, etc., is unnecessary because the application of Mexican Mustang Lincture to the affected part, or a few drops of it in the ear, affords instantaneous relief. For cuts, wounds, bruises, swellings, and all injuries, which require treatment, ext. Mustang Lincture is every where regarded as the most potent and reliable healing agent in existence. For all external injuries, ailments of horses and cattle, it is invaluable.

His Honor, HENRY POTTER, late Judge of the United States Court for the District of North Carolina, gave the following as his opinion of Beckwith's Pills: "For some ten or twelve years past I have been troubled with dyspepsia, and have used WITH'S ANTI-DYSPEPSIA PILLS, and have found them to be the best medicine I ever used for the relief of dyspepsia, and have had many others who have been cured by them. As an appetizer, they are excellent. I have long had the pleasure of an intimate acquaintance with the inventor of these Pills. He is a gentleman of talents, integrity and worth, and he ranks high in the science of medicine and the healing art." Prepared by E. R.
