THE PHILADELPHIA CENTENNIAL. We are glad to see that the Hon. Hamilton Fish has at once corrected the very damaging effects upon the Centennial which would have been entailed by an adherence to the iron clad oath as a pre-requisite to qualification to hold a commission under its appointment.

STANLY COUNTY. We receive cheering news from gallant little Stanly: a county that since its creation has always been found in the right place. She has never known what it was to falter or to hesitate when country or party called upon her.

THE UNIVERSITY FUND. We learn from Mr. Kemp P. Battle, chairman of the committee for raising contributions for the revival of the University, that he finds the most gratifying interest taken in the subject, not only among the sons of the University, but all the friends of higher education.

of June, when the reports will be in. Mr. Battle requests that those willing to help the University, to whom he may not send subscription papers will communicate with him at once.

He further requests that newspapers desiring to aid the revival of the University will please copy this notice.

ADDRESS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE. We gave to our readers yesterday morning the address which the Executive Committee has issued to the people of North Carolina, to arouse them upon the subject of the Convention, and to direct their thoughts to the questions which will arise during the summer's canvass.

One of the difficulties which has opposed itself to the call of the Convention has been the apathetic indifference into which the people of the State had fallen with respect to the monstrosities and burdens of the Canby Constitution. Like a permanent disease in the physical frame, they had learned to endure what seemed to be inevitable, and were loth to make the effort to relieve themselves of burdens which time and use had made tolerable.

Under a wise principle in the mental constitution men reconcile themselves to what they believe to be irremediable. Under a less praiseworthy principle, they cease to strive against assaults upon their liberties, and sink listlessly into the arms of the oppressor.

It was to recall to the people a knowledge of the rights they had lost, a resumption of the powers wrested from them, a deliverance from the burdens which oppressed them, a return to their primitive system of government, a restoration of economy in the administration of their internal affairs, a renewal of the simplicity and clearness in the application of the laws, that the Convention was called.

Lovers of home plants will be sorry to learn that the oleander is a dangerous plant. But so it is. Children have been poisoned by eating the flower petals, cattle have been killed by browsing on the foliage; a single drop, it is said, of the milky, acrid juice that exudes when a twig is broken, is sufficient to produce the death of an infant. The odor exhaled from the blossom is also deleterious to the health.

A man in Paris recently offered to lend money to doctors on the security of their diplomas. Several young doctors availed themselves of this offer, but when afterwards they disappeared, when it became evident that he had procured the diplomas with the intention of selling them.

character, and utterly subversive of that principle that the will of the people must be supreme that of a discontented and weakening faction may prevail.

We commend the address to our readers. It is the first gun of the campaign and we hope its thunder will wake up our friends to action.

A Response From "Patron." Mr. Editor—We do not desire to continue to lessen Mr. Turner's credit, but when he attempts to deceive and mislead the people, he must not do it at the expense of the best people in Orange. Mr. Turner in his reply of the 31st of May, in a communication, asks you, pray, are we? Are we a Rail Road President or one of the Lawyers that stood waiting for Dr. Blackwell when he came with messages from Sweden? Now don't make Turner strike man's weakest point, his pride, when he classes us, a farmer's son, with Railroad Presidents, &c. We were in the late Orange County Convention, and we were not at all in the wrong as Mr. Turner was, but said, burrah for Kerr, Strudwick, Atwater, Latta, Joe Davis and the others, and voted for the nominees. Now let us see what Mr. Turner has to say about the Orange County Convention last year. He writes communications to the most influential men of Orange in the name of Harrison and others, and asks them to sign his name. He goes to the Legislature in order to defeat the thing for the public printing. The letters were signed or pretended to be signed by three men of Wake, and the letters were sent to the Orange County Convention last year. He writes communications to the most influential men of Orange in the name of Harrison and others, and asks them to sign his name.

Why did these men fall? Was it because they were moved merely by a great impulse or the spirit of party faction? No. Let us award the glory where it is due to the fallen heroes on both sides. Both fought for what they considered great principles. The men of the one section for what they considered their local liberties, and the other for national honor and liberty. Let us truth be fully understood, namely, that the struggle was not a struggle of the blue but also a struggle of the great triumph of liberty, order and protection to the country at large.

The Lucas Sleeping Car. The first one of these new cars arrived in this city Monday morning, over the Air-Line Railroad. The inventor is a Mr. Lucas, a resident of Atlanta, Ga., who has long been Superintendent of this division of the Pullman Palace Car Line, who intends to run in competition with Pullman since he began admitting negroes to berths in his cars.

During the twenty years that Lord Falmouth has been connected with racing, on the only occasion has he been tempted to make a bet. When on a visit to Whitehall to see his filly Queen Bertha, he asked Mrs. Scott, wife of the trainer, what would win the Oaks. She replied: "Queen Bertha, my lord." He bet on her, and his sixpence, which he had set on rubies and diamonds, and presented to Mrs. Scott.

The New York Tribune of Saturday says a revised trade in that city is manifest. With the exception of the spring it declares, "there has come a rapid development of retail business, and leading houses find their receipts much exceeding those of last year." In fact, the general testimony is that the spring trade may put a quietus on the cry of hard times.

Federal Decoration Day in the North. Decoration Day was generally observed in New York city on Monday, and large meetings were held at different places. At the Academy of Music speeches were made by Wm. Cullen Bryant, Dr. Osgood, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford and others.

Ladies and Gentlemen.—In the presence of so many soldiers of the Army of the Republic, I feel that I would rather be a listener than a speaker here to-night. This is a memorable occasion. We have met to commemorate the deeds of the brave who fell in battle, in the South as well as in the North. Some may say, Why this commemoration? Why renew the memory of the great strife? We might simply answer, Because we cannot help it. We must remember what is very near to our hearts. The cause of our trouble is in the grave, and through the grave our feelings must find expression.
