> THE ROCKY POINT ROBBERY AND Assault.-The Wilmington Journal of Sunday has the following additional particulars of the robbery last Thursday of Dr. Satchwell:

"We were glad to see that Dr. Satchwell was able to be in the city vesterday, after his desperate struggle with the negro ruffian who assaulted him with a murderous bludgeon on Thursday night, an account of which we published yesterday

"We are informed that Rocky Point, and other places in Pender county, are intested with desperadoes in the shape of negro thieves and troubers. They are mainly believed be escaped convicts and other villians and cut-throats from Wilmington, and are stealing and lepredating in various ways upon the igens of Pender. The Journal says the prospect seems to be that the disease will have quite an extensive run, but will not be so serious at its former visitation. Capt. Southerland, of that city, gave that paper the following intermation in regard to the disease and its treatment:

"The horses should be kept dry and carefully tended, and the affliction will probably pass away in a few days. It is a regular epidemic which he has seen a great many times. It depends altogether on the condition of the atmosphere, and coid, damp will cause an increase of the disease, and perhaps cause the victims to fill early graves. A cruel hoax was perpetrated by some graceless scamp on Thursday night, in sending to all the morning papers, through the District Tele graph Company, an advertisement over the name of Dr. Alfred Stille. announcing the sudden death of his brother, Professor Charles J. Stille provost of the University of Pennsylvania. Two of the papers even went to the extent of basing lengthy obituary notices on the advertisement thus received, without waiting to authenticate it. The announcement was a great shock to Professor Stille's friends, who could have no reason for doubting it, and many of them will not learn of its falsity until The concocting of to-day. story, the imposition of it upon the newspapers with such ingenuity. shows a degree, if not of malice, at least of utter recklessness, and cunning combined, which could only belong to an accomplished scoundrel We hesitate to believe, with some of our afternoon contemporaries, that any student of the University could be guilty of such an outrage. Students have always been noted for prac tical jokes, but it seems impossible that any young gentleman of the intelligence, refinement and high ambition usually characteristic of those aspiring to a classical education could have been guilty of so coarse and senseless an outrage. Whoever the perpetrator was he deserves severe punishment, and we hope he may get it .- Philadelphia Times.

Here we see before in drays, are more liable to disease as whisky, tobacco, sugar, etc., imthan any others, as the exposure posed by the last Congress, does not seem to have produced the revenue to the government that was expected from it. The increase during seven months, beginning with March last. has amounted to but 5,000,000, at which ratio the total for the year will not exceed $9,000,000. This is alike a disappointment to Secretary Bristow and the majority of the members of the ways and means committee who were very confident at the outset that this plan of swelling the receipt of the Treasury would be immediately successful. They doubtless omitted in their estimates however, the fact that the first result of the tax would be a decrease in manufacturing and the consumption of stocks on hand. It is to this cause that The handsome pictures of two their disappointment is to be attributed but it is more than likely now that manufacturing has become a necessity that the closing months mington, N. Crowd.

This morning a wild bull got separated from a drove of Texas cattle being driven through the city, and set out on a tour through the principal thoroughfares. About a dozen of the crack drovers of the city were detailed to capture him and bring him in, and the scenes that ensued were decidedly amusing and somewhat exciting.

The bull, after a quiet gallop of a dozen blocks, cooled down and waited for his pursuers. They came up considerably out of breath, but with a large amount of bluster and bravado, which showed clearly that they were not afraid of the bull. The bull came up with perfect calmness, and some persons were so foolish as to suppose that this showed that he was not afraid of them. The result proved that these persons were right.

The bull stood still. So did his pursuers.

Then there was a private caucus, to which the bull was not invited. He did not like this. He resented it. He invited himself. Then there was not a caucus. Then the bull shook his head. So did the pursuers. They were in different localitiesone in a doorway, another behind a telegraph pole and another behind a barrel. They considered. They called across the street to each other, What are you afraid of?" The other said, "What are you afraid of?"

Then they said, "Let's lasso him." Then they said, "Agreed; you do it." But no one was exactly ready. Each one was out of practice. The bull listened and smiled. He walked calmly toward each one separately and offered his horns for the lasso. Each one separately ran as he never ran before.

Finally by some mischance in the excitement a rope fell over his horns. It was immediately fastened to a telegraph pole.-But the bull didn't mind about that, He just went on and directly there was no rope about

Then imprecations came fast and fearful. Shouts of laughter also. The bull stopped on the corner of Sixth and Walnut. So did about one thous and persons. When he turned toward the northwest corner exactly two hundred and fifty persons ran and seven hundred and fifty laughed. When he looked toward the northeast corner seven hundred and fifty ran and those opposite laughed louder. Several men engaged in the exercise of throwing harmless lassoes after him, and one succeeded in getting the rope over his tail, but it did not stay there.

Then he started toward the crowd and they ran. An old woman, with a basket of eggs on her arm, fell over, so did the basket. Then he looked the other way and a man fell out of his wagon. When he looked up all the people in the second story screamed and drew back from the windows and let down the curtains. Of all the crowd the men with the ropes showed the most agility-in running. At last the bull was caught. A man with a long stick held out a rope and he walked under it. Then there was a cheering. The rope was large and new, and it held him. It was attached to a four horse wagon, and at this writing the bull is being dragged away, and the man who held out the rope is wiping the cold sweat away and being crowned victor by the admiring throng in an adjoining

At the corner of Sycamore and Seventh the rope was unfastened from the wagon, and the bull attacked the horses. The matter now became serious, and the efforts of the crowd were turned to the defense of the team and destruction of the bull. One horse was badly gored in the side and in the head by the bull, and the rope, which was still around the animal's head, fastened to a lamp post. Another rope was got around his body and legs, and he was thrown down and finally killed with an ax. and hauled off in a wagon. Several men were injured by running over each other. TOM COLLINS TURNS UP AT LAST. -The records of Buncombe Superior Court shew that this ubiquitous individual has at last been found by Sheriff Young (no one else could have found him) and is now under subpoena to attend Buncombe Superior Court. He was three or four times "solemnly" called during the last term of the court, but, as usual, failed to put in an appearance when ne ded. What Solicitor Gudger wants with him remains to be seen. We do hope that he has not been imposed upon (as many other "worthy fellows have been) and made to believe that the aforesaid Thomas has been saying something derogatory to his high character. Should the Solicitor succeed in securing Tom's attendance. Woodson can come up, and make known his grievance against him. There is a funny side to even so sad

a case as the abduction of Charlie Ross. The father of the lost boy tells the story to a reporter of the Philadelphia Times. While in Canada recently, he saw the circular of a circus manager announcing wax figures of the Ross family, together with an offer from the manager himself of a reward of $2,000 for the discovery of the boy. Mr. Ross went to the circus and saw figures of himself and wife, and Charlie, none of which bere the least resemblance to the originals. Without making himself known he taiked with the exhibitor, who told him he was a frequent visitor at the Ross household, and that all of the figures were strikingly accurate likenesses. When Mr. Ross made himself known the man was dumbfounded for a moment, but immediately expressed his deep sympathy, declaring his willingness to pay the $2,000 reward, and offered, in case the boy was found to give the father $1,000 a week for 30 weeks, for the privilege of exhibiting him.

Of course Fred Grant won't resign his position in the army; he proposes to attend to a little banking business first in Washington. His salary however goes on whilst the country demands reform. - Puttsburg Post, "Say!" said a city youth to the

THE MAINTENANCE OF HEALTH.—The maintenance of health is often more difficult than its recovery. Vitlated conditions of the atmosphere, unhealthy occu-pations, extremes of the heat or cold, and constant exposure to rough weather, are all so many provocations of disease. There is but one sure way of effectually guarding the system when thus subjected to influence a prejudicist to health, and that is to establish, by judicious tonic and alterative medication, vigor of the body and regularity of its functions. The properties of an invigorant and corrective are nappily combined in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, at the same time that it infuses unwonted vitality into the system overcomes all tendency of the stomach, liver bowels and urinary organs to deviate from regularity in the discharge of functions upon which the welfare of the entire physical organization is dependent. Health cannot be more effectively maintained than by using the Bitter. sined than by using the Bitters,
