The Council of Tyrants.

From "Paroles d'un Croisant," by F. Lamennais. It was a gloomy night; a starless sky hung heavily over the earth like a black marble dome over a tomb, and nothing interrupted the silence of the night but a strange sound like the tapping of wings which from time to time is heard over the cities and fields.

In a hall hung with black, and lighted by the dull red glimmer of a single lamp, seven men, crowned and robed in purple, were sitting upon seven seats of iron. In the centre of the hall was raised a throne, composed of the bones of the dead, and, at the foot of the throne, in place of a footstool, there was a crucifix overturned; and before the throne, a table of ebony, on which were a vessel filled with blood, red and foaming, and a human skull.

And the seven crowned men seemed thoughtful and sad, and from the depths of their hollow sockets, their eyes from time to time darted sparks of livid fire. And one of them rose and with tottering step approached the throne, and trod under foot the crucifix. At this moment his limbs trembled, and he seemed ready to faint. The others gazed at him motionless; but an indescribable expression passed over their features, and an unearthly smile contracted their lips.

And they all replied, "It is true. Let us abolish the religion of Christ." Then the second advanced to the throne, took the skull, which he filled with blood, drank, and addressed them as follows: "It is not religion only which must be abolished, but science and thought also; for science teaches men that which it is not for our good that they should know, and thought is always ready to contend against force."

And all answered, "It is true. Let us abolish science and thought." The third, after imitating the example of the first two, thus spoke: "When we have plunged men back again into brutishness by taking from them religion, science and thought, we shall have accomplished much; but there will still remain something else for us to do. The brute has instinct and dangerous sympathies; therefore no people should hear the voice of any other, for fear that if one should murmur and become restless, another might be tempted to do the same. Then let no rumor from without penetrate our kingdoms."

And all answered, "It is true. Let us exhaust strength and energy, and courage by corruption." Then suddenly the lamp which lighted the hall was extinguished, and the seven men vanished in the darkness. And it was said to righteous man, who, at that moment, watched and prayed before the cross, "My day approaches, adore and fear not."

LYTTONAL REVISION IN ENGLISH CHURCH. - The Archbishop of Canterbury is about to receive a deputation of churchmen whose object is to induce him not to accede to any alteration of the formularies of the Church of England. - The reference is supposed to be a design of the Bishop of London to introduce a bill which would prohibit some of the ornaments with which it has lately been the practice of clergymen to bedeck themselves. The memorialists object to any such interference with the liberty of the clergy to dress as they please in the celebration of divine service.

IMPORTANT SALE. ON WEDNESDAY, THE 24TH OF JANUARY, 1866, I shall offer for sale my plantation in Bertie County, lying on the home of my father, the late Genl. H. W. Hilditch, and is a very fine tract of 700 acres of Woodland in excellent condition, containing 600 acres more or less, to be cleared and well adapted to the growth of cotton, corn, wheat, &c. There is a very fine opportunity to make a large profit on the plantation for the year 1866, as of course to complete crop ready made in 1866, 3000 pounds of cotton and 4000 bushels of corn, and with proper management will do 100000 worth of cotton, with a fair crop of corn, and the rest of the land has been cleared for the past two years. A very great advantage which this farm has in its convenience to transport to London being only one mile to a good landing on the river where there is a regular line of steamers to Norfolk weekly. In addition to the above, this is a fine tract of land in the north of the county that has five wood sheds, convenient for use; there is an abundance of water, a fine view of the river, and a fine view of the State. Lumber dealers would do well to examine the land before the day of sale. There are about 600 or 500 acres on this tract un-cleared, which affords a fine range of 6000 and a free access to number six acres of un-cleared land renders it very profitable for the raising of cattle, and so forth. The improvements consist of a fine house and cotton a new overseer's house, cabins enough for 25 or 30 laborers, corn barns &c. At the same time and place, I shall sell 200 or 300 bushels of corn, fodder, mules, hogs, hives, farming utensils, &c. Terms for the land, one third cash, the balance in two equal instalments, payable respectively in 12 and 18 months, and title without any payments made. For the further particulars, address the subscriber at Raleigh, Gran county, N. C. D. C. CLARK, Jan. 2, 1866-121-3m.
