

DAILY SENTINEL

WM. E. PELL, Proprietor.

Death of Cotton.

If anything can obstruct the gradual march of the country in its career of prosperity...

The New York Chamber of Commerce, having considered the expediency of a cotton-grower's association...

It is believed, however, that in the near future a view can be taken of the cotton crop...

Egypt, Brazil, and the East Indies will not afford much relief to the cotton market...

We must therefore turn again to the cotton fields of the United States for a supply of the indispensable staple.

The cotton report of Messrs. Neil, Brothers & Co., New Orleans, for December 30, 1865...

They estimate the total supply of old and new cotton for 1865 at two millions and one hundred thousand bales...

As to the product of the present year, after a personal survey of the cotton-growing regions...

Estimated Supply of Cotton for 1866 - 7, [September 22, 1865]

Georgia and Florida, 80,000 to 100,000 bales; Mobile, 300,000 to 350,000; New Orleans, 500,000 to 600,000...

Thus it will be seen that we only anticipate from 200,000 to 300,000 bales from the Atlantic States and Florida...

The Memphis Commercial, in commenting on this estimate, gives reasons for the opinion that it is somewhat exaggerated...

Let us deduce from the facts one plain lesson. The South of cotton will not and will be developed. It cannot be permitted to die.
