To-day I saw a bill, in which so I hired a good one, and spred my pocket book down before him, and told him to take "masheenry" was spelt with two esses and four case. But the greatest difficulty is in under-standin the law after it is made. Among lawwhat would satisfy him. And he tuk. Old Phil Stone Ware, Davis was the jestice. Marka made the openin speech to the effek that every professional man yers this diffikulty dont seem to lie so much in ight to be able to illustrate his trade, and he the head, as in the pocket. For five dollars a lawyer can luminize some, and more akkordin therefore proposed to put Mr. Fretman on the stand and spell him. This motion were fout to pay. But he oughent to luminize but one hard, but it agreed with old Phil's notions of side at a time. The first case I over had in a jestice court, I employed old Bob Liggins, who "high jestice," and says he, "Mr. Fretman, you will have to spell sur." Mark then swore him, was a sorter of a self-educated fool. I give him that he would give true evidence in this case, and that he would spell every word in Daniel Webster's spellin book correctly, to the best of too dollars in advance, and he argued the case as I thought on two sides, and was more lumihis knowledge and belief, so help him," &c. I adve then that he wer trembling all over like a cold wet ving: "Says Mark," Mr. Fretman, spell "tisik;" well he spelt it, puttin in a pk and a th and a gk and a sk, and I don't know what lars to lose my case. I look upon this as a war nin to all clients, to pay big fees and keep your lawyer out of temptation. : My experience in litigation have not been satall, and I thought he was gone up the first pop, but Marks and it was right. He then spell him right strait along on all sorts of big words, and little words, and long words, and short words, and afterwords and he knowd em all, till finally isfactory. I sued Sugar Black onst for the price of a load of shuks. He said he wanted to buy some ruffness, and I agreed to bring him a load of shuks for two dollars. My wagin got broke and he got tired a waitin, and senf out after the shuks hisself.
