Gen. Wade Hampton's Letter.

The following is Gen. Wade Hampton's letter to Senator Reverdy Johnson, which the latter caused to be read in the United States Senate, as already stated:

WILD WOODS, MISS., April 21, 1866.

To the Hon. Reverdy Johnson, U. S. Senate:

SIR: A few days ago I saw in the published proceedings of Congress that a petition from Benj. Rowles, of Columbia, S. C., asking compensation for the destruction of his home by the Federal army in February, 1865, had been presented to the Senate, accompanied by a letter from Major General Sherman. In this letter General S. used the following language:—"They"—the citizens of Columbia—"set fire to thousands of bales of cotton rolled out into the streets, and which were burning before I entered Columbia. I myself was in the city as early as nine, and I saw these fires and knew efforts had been made to extinguish them; but a high and strong wind kept them alive. I gave no orders for the burning of your city, but, on the contrary, the reverse, and I believe the conflagration resulted from the great imprudence of cutting the cotton bales, whereby the contents were spread to the winds so that it became an impossibility to arrest the fire. I saw in your Columbia newspapers the printed order of General Wade Hampton, that on the approach of the Yankee army all the cotton should be burned, and, from what I saw myself, I have no hesitation in saying that he was the cause of the destruction of your city."

This grave charge made against me by General S. having been brought before the Senate of the United States, I am naturally most solicitous to vindicate myself before the same tribunal. But my State has no representative in that city. Those who should be there are debarred the right of entrance. In those halls there are none to speak for the South; none to participate in the legislation which governs her; none to impose the taxes she is called on to pay, and none to defend her or to vindicate her sons from misrepresentation, injustice, or slander. Under these circumstances I appeal to you, in the confident hope that you will use every effort to see that justice is done in this matter. I deny most emphatically that any cotton was fired in Columbia by my order; I deny that her citizens set fire to thousands of bales rolled out into the streets; I deny that any cotton was on fire when the Federal troops entered the city. And I most respectfully ask of Congress to appoint a committee charged with the duty of ascertaining and reporting all the facts connected with the destruction of Columbia, and thus fixing upon the proper author of that enormous crime the infamy he deserves.

I am willing to submit the case to any honest tribunal. Before any such I pledge myself to prove my positive orders, by direction of General Beauregard, that no cotton should be fired—that not one bale was on fire when Sherman's troops took possession of the city—that he positively promised protection to the city—and that in spite of this solemn promise, his soldiers burned it to the ground, deliberately, systematically, atrociously. I, therefore, most earnestly request that Congress may take prompt and efficient measures to investigate this matter fully. Not only is this due to themselves and to the reputation of the United States army, but to justice and to truth. Trusting that you will pardon me for troubling you, I am, &c. WADE HAMPTON.

The reading of the above manly letter made quite a scene in the Senate. Mr. Fessenden protested. Mr. Sherman waxed exceedingly valiant against the absent man. He confessed he had never shed many tears over the burning of Columbia, (who ever supposed he did?) Of Hampton's letter he said:

The impudence of this whole thing surpasses imagination. He writes to this Senate that the State of South Carolina is excluded from representation in this body. And why is she excluded? Because they violated their oath, and have for years been trying to get out of the Union, and now that they are beaten and defeated they whine like whipped curs to get back.

Mr. Johnson said he had shown the letter to Mr. Sherman and he had advised him to present it.

Mr. Sherman. For the purpose of refuting it.

Mr. Johnson did not look upon the letter as whining because the State of South Carolina was not represented here. The writer had only alleged that as a cause for sending the letter to him. (Mr. J.)

Mr. Fessenden hoped it would not be received at all. It had no business here.

Mr. Conness said he could not vote to send this petition to any committee of this body, and he was only surprised that the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Sherman) should think it necessary to vindicate the character of our distinguished General against the assaults of such a man as Wade Hampton. Let these men explain their crimes before they come here with their complaints.

Mr. Wilson hoped that the Senator from Maryland would withdraw the letter.

Mr. Johnson withdrew it.

A Thrilling Incident.

A contributor to the Atlanta Intelligencer concludes his "Reminiscences of the War, No. 2," with the following incident of the battle of Gettysburg:

"When General Longstreet advanced upon the Federal left, its first line was carried. But the enemy being heavily reinforced, rallied, and in turn drove our position of the line (Anderson's brigade) from the position, as well as other brigades on our right and left. Again we charged, and were again driven back. This was a critical moment for us; nearly all of our general officers were wounded. Our heavy line had crumbled to a mere handful, and the flower of Longstreet's corps lay weltering in blood. We were slowly retreating, leaving many of our dead and wounded in the hands of the exulting foe. The hosts of the enemy came on like the mighty tides of the ocean, and the pæans of victory were already rising from their haughty lips.—The blue hills in their rear were bristling with bayonets, and pouring torrents of reinforcements down their winding slopes. Now, when we should have been reinforced with thirty thousand troops, General Lee had not a man to send us. Officers broke their swords upon the rocks, and many of them wept. Our dead and wounded comrades lay around us by thousands, and it seemed as if there was no hand to save the shattered remnant from destruction. But aid did not come—a man—a solitary man threw himself before the juggernaut of Federal power, and alone, unaided, sought to stay its onward progress. I remember, as if it were but yesterday, the zouave cap and iron gray beard of the stranger. None knew him, but all idolized him for his bravery. He moved through the awful storm with a steady step, and his uplifted arm seemed to say to the advancing foe "thus far shalt thou come and no farther." He said nothing, but his godlike example made a hero of every man who saw him. Soldiers looked in the face of their comrades, and the question came simultaneously to their blackened lips "Who is he?" echoed right and left, far up and down the line. The enemy came on like a tornado, and the proud hero stood enveloped in their muskets like a lion at bay. Men forgot to reload their pieces or concealed themselves behind the rocks, but stood stupefied with wonder. "Who is he?" men groaned—"who is he?" officers repeated until the cry became fearful "General Lee," some one shouted, and the word ran along the line like an electric flash. "General Lee, forever!" rang loud above the battle's roar, and as one man our gallant soldiers rushed like a thunder bolt upon the astonished foe; "Follow General Lee!" cried our wounded comrades, as they lay upon the trampled earth and tossed up their bloody caps. No body of men on the broad green earth could have withstood the terrible impetuosity of this onset. The Federal troops, though they fought desperately, were compelled to give back, and at last to retreat in confusion to the heights, leaving their dead and wounded in our hands.

But where was the stranger? "Alas! The paths of glory lead but to the grave." The war is over now, and the brave men whom we met that day as deadly enemies we now meet as friends. We would not detract one ray from the crown of the military glory that adorns each of their heroes, but would do justice to our lamented dead; and if, by this imperfect sketch, I can add one flower to the chaplet of a fallen hero's fame, I shall feel myself amply rewarded. And that hero—"who is he?" The answer comes up from the graves of Gettysburg—Gen. Paul J. Semmes.

SALISBURY BRASS BAND

REORGANIZED 1st January, 1866, on a larger scale than formerly, under the direction of its former tutor, W. H. NEAVE, who was also chief music writer and Band Teacher in Gen. Lee's army. He will be assisted in leadership and direction by his brother, Ed. Neave, leader during the entire late war of Gen. Lee's best and most favorite band, viz: 4th N. C. The Band is composed of the best members of the old Band, together with the best members of several of the fine Bands trained by W. H. Neave, in camps who have moved to Salisbury from all points in the State to follow their respective vocations and continue the study and practice of music. This Band will be a permanent institution for all State and festive occasions, and will equal (to be it to be found in the world, if sustained by those desiring a fine order of Brass and String music; if not, it must go down after this year.

W. H. Neave is also agent for the celebrated Dodworth Brass instruments, prized and warranted to him, and by him to others; also, the most pleasing, effective and popular Piano music, selected by his friends, H. R. Dodworth and Kent Bedford, New York. For beginners, medium players, and advanced musicians no Band or either.

Music composed and arranged to order for Parlor, Orchestral and Brass Band use for any kind and number of instruments.

Salisbury has been selected for Musical Headquarters for its central position.

N. B. Mere letters of enquiry for musical information, but with no view to business with Mr. Neave or Band, must contain two postage stamps.
