FROM WASHINGTON.

The President's Tour—The Test Oath—Radical Designs at the Elections—Troops Offered by Illinois to the Missouri Radicals—The Programme of the Philadelphia Mulatto Convention—Negro Suffrage the Basis of the Radical Policy—The Removals Progressing.

(Correspondence of the Richmond Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.

The President's removals attract much attention. His tour to the Northern, Middle and Western States, accompanied, as he will be, by members of the Cabinet, General Grant, and scores of influential personal and political friends, will be full of interest. His progress will awaken the latent enthusiasm of the masses of the people, who eagerly await the restoration of peace, tranquility and prosperity, such as was enjoyed in former times. The people have now discovered that the Radicals cannot "save the Union," though that was their object in supporting the war. They will take the Union-saving machinery into their own hands. They know that they can save it simply by acting upon the principles of the late National Union Convention.

The Radicals know that they are beaten, and hence in their desperation they threaten another war. They propose to commence the war in Missouri. Half a dozen of the leading Radical organ have already suggested this as their best resort. The Conservatives of Missouri have demanded protection from the Executive Government in the exercise of their rights as citizens at the polls. Senator Henderson, of Missouri, admitted, in one of his speeches of the late session, that more than half of the loyal voters of Missouri are excluded by the test oath. So it is with Tennessee at this moment. It will be so with Maryland, unless Governor Swann's measures prevent it.

The Radicals expect to provoke a conflict of arms at these elections. The President will, of course, give them the aid of the United States military force, and he and General Grant are happily in accord. The military power will be used by the President rather for the protection of citizens than for their oppression. The Radical organs say that he seeks to avoid the issue presented by the Missouri Conservatives. He will more probably meet it when it shall arise. General Frank Blair has expressed his belief that the election in Missouri will be attended with violence unless the Radical usurpation can be frowned down by the Government.

Governor Ordway, in a recent speech, has pledged Illinois to furnish two hundred thousand troops to be employed in supporting the Radicals in Missouri, or in any other State where they may need such aid to maintain their despotic sway. All the Radical authorities will promise the same.

Remarkable developments are made of the Radical policy for the future, in case of its success at the fall elections.

The Southern Radicals, in their Convention to be held on the 3d of August in Philadelphia, will dictate the mode in which the Southern States shall, in future, be governed by Congress. The Northern Radical delegations that may attend the meeting, will embrace and recommend their scheme. It is already divulged that the plan recommended will be to reduce the Southern states, except Tennessee, to territorial dependencies, and hold them subject to the legislation of Congress for an indefinite time. The Radical leaders and organ have expressed their indignation at the fifth resolution of the Philadelphia Convention, which declares that legislation in regard to the right of suffrage belongs only to the States themselves. In opposition to this, they now avow the purpose of forcing negro suffrage upon all the States and Territories. They only deferred this measure for the reason that the Northern mind was not yet quite prepared for it. While announcing the principle and detailing the purpose to act upon it, they admitted that it was impolitic to make it an issue at the coming elections in Pennsylvania and some other States. It is to be the corner stone of the Radical policy, if, indeed, they succeed in securing the next Congress.

It is believed that the Southern Radical Convention will recommend the impeachment and removal of the President. This is quite probable. Their Northern allies will require it, and will make it a pretext for a measure already determined upon. The President is steadily, and as rapidly as convenient, making removals and appointments. The system of removal is adopted. Postmaster General Randall and Secretary McCook are carrying it out. The military changes are in the conservative interest, as, for instance, the assignment of General T. C. Howard to the post of Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau, instead of General Howard. The Radicals have found out that the President will look closely after the administration of the Bureau.

New life has been imparted to business operations by the prospect now afforded by the proceedings of the National Union Convention, and the President's proclamation of sincere confidence in the future prospects of the country, under conservative counsels, will invigorate industry and enterprise. Commerce between the South and the North will be restored to its former activity, and its field of operations will be enlarged. The product of cereals in the West and of cotton in the South promises well for active business in the coming autumn. The heavy stock of goods now on the hands of importers and manufacturers will be in demand for Southern and Western consumption, and probably at lower prices.

If the wise suggestion of Secretary McCook, in his recent letter to a Boston Committee, be carried into practical effect by legislation, further depreciation of Government credit and securities will be arrested, and a gradual advance towards a specie standard be secured.

A Southern lady has published a letter in which she expresses her mortification and chagrin at the number of people from the South who are daily to be found in New York soliciting subscriptions and contributions from the Yankees for all kinds of charitable purposes in the South. She says that if this continues, strangers will extort the same kind of contributions as taxevils in Ireland do of the Irish. We think the picture is overdrawn, but there is some truth in it.
