THE SENTINEL.

Tuesday Evening, Oct 23, 1866.

From the "National Intelligencer."

Representation Upon Equality of Numbers.

The great argument in favor of the constitutional amendment is, that unless it is adopted the Southern people will have an undue share of political power.

This argument assumes that our form of Government is the expression of numbers only, than which nothing can be more erroneous, as will be obvious from the slightest consideration.

To begin: The President is not elected merely by numbers. Each State has as many electoral votes, in the first place, as she has. Representatives, and to this number are added two more for the Senators.

Now New York has thirty-one Representatives; Rhode Island has two. In the Presidential election, if population were the only element, New York would have thirty-one votes to Rhode Island's two. But, in reality, New York has only thirty-three votes to Rhode Island's four.

In the Senate numbers are not regarded at all. Rhode Island has two Senators, the same number that New York has. So that a man in New York is equal to fifteen men in New York in the Senate. And it is a curious fact that the very men who are clamorous about a man in Louisiana counting as two men in New York, proposed to admit Colorado as a State, whose population does not entitle her to half a Representative. A man, then, in Colorado would have a voice in the House of Representatives equal to sixty men in New York.

In the Senate a majority of the States, representing a population of about a fourth of the whole, may have everything their own way; and this part of our system of government cannot in strict law be altered by any amendment of the Constitution, without the unanimous consent of every State.

It would seem by this that our ancestors wished to render a government of mere numbers impossible. The Senate, too, it must be remembered, has, in addition to every function the House has, (except the originating of money bills,) several of the most important character which the House does not have, as to the treaty-making power, the appointment to office, and also acts as a court in impeachments.

So important is the Constitution, the most important act that the States can perform under our system of government, the assent of three-fourths of the States is necessary. In this great sovereign act no regard is had to population.—Rhode Island has the same voice as New York has; and it is possible that three-fourths of the States may have a population less than one-half of the whole population of the United States, and thus the great prerogative of amending the Constitution may be exercised by less than a majority of the people of the United States.

Nothing was further from the intention of the founders of our Government than to rest it on mere numbers. With them nothing was more absolutely at war with the genius of our Government than the diversity of numbers.

They made our Government constitutional, not numerical. The great men who framed it did not wish to establish a democracy pure and simple; for all history, all philosophy had taught them that of all forms of government, that was the most stupid and the most execrable.

And yet the great argument in favor of the constitutional amendment is, that a man in Louisiana, unless something is done, will have as much power as two men in New York. The next time this cry is raised, let it be advised, if Colorado is admitted, a half a man there will have as much power in the Government as thirty-one men in New York.

Yet it may be remarked, in concluding, that if innovations are to prevail, it can hardly be expected that the great inequality of Senatorial representation shall not be reached, and overthrown in some manner.

A KNOWING ELEPHANT. —There is an anecdote told of an elephant in the Jardin des Plantes in Paris, which amusingly illustrates the exquisite sense of smell with which elephants are endowed. The interior of an elephant's trunk is lined with an immense olfactory nerve, by which the animal is able to detect the faintest odor at a distance. He finds that the orange flower yields the most delicious of all perfumes, and travels state that in Japan elephants may frequently be seen burying their trunks in the foliage of orange trees to enjoy the fragrance. The other day the large elephant in the Jardin des Plantes suddenly ceased picking up the bread and cakes offered to him by the visitors of the garden, drew in his trunk, and continued to follow along the railings of his enclosure a lady who was carrying in her hand a bouquet of orange flowers. The lady's attention was called to his movements, and she at once held the bouquet within his reach. The animal seized the flowers, inhaled the perfume with great delight for several moments; and here comes the least credible portion of the story—again put forth its trunk and restored the bouquet to the lady. One understands an elephant's passion for sweet smell, but hardly comprehends his manifestation of gallantry and good breeding.

WE WANT YOU. —There is an advertisement in the "Daily News" of New York, which deserves to be copied, as it is very instructive.

Having traveled extensively in Texas during the last five years, and close observation having become thoroughly acquainted with the intrinsic value of Lands in Eastern and Middle Texas, I with confidence offer my services to the Public, finding none of greater value than those of stocks not profited.

In consequence of the bonds and items held by the State on various Rail Road Companies, having been partially paid off, and the stocks held by the State in the railroads, I will offer to exchange for the principal of the bonds issued by the State, the following are the principal:

North Carolina E. & Co. $100,000.00,
Raleigh & Gaston R. R. Co. $600,000.00,
Atlanta & N. C. R. R. $1,000,000.00,
Western & Atlantic R. R. Co. $1,400,000.00.

No bid less than par will be entertained. Any premium offered may be applied to payment of interest due on the bonds offered in exchange. Bids will be opened in the presence of the Governor and Comptroller, and those will be accepted most advantageous to the State.

Parcels of preferred stock will not obtain rights greater than holders of stocks not profited.
