Artemus Ward at the Tower of London.

I saw at once that the Tower was established on a firm basis. In the entire history of human baseness I don't find a basis more firm than this one.

"You have no Tower in America?" said a man in the crowd, who had somehow detected my denomination.

"Alas! no," I answered; "we boast of our enterprise and improvements, and yet we are devoid of a Tower. America, my unhappy country, thou hast got no Tower! It's a sad boon."

The gates were opened after a while, and we all purchased tickets, and went into a waiting room.

"My friend," said a pale faced little man in black close, "this is a sad day."

"Inasmuch as to how?" I asked.

"I mean it is sad to think that so many people have been killed within these gloomy walls. My friend, let us drop a tear."

"No," I said, "you must excuse me. Others may drop one if they feel like it; but as for me, I decline. The early managers of this institution were a bad lot, and their crimes were truly awful; but I can't sob for those who died four or five hundred years ago. If they was my own relatives I couldn't. It's absurd to shed tears over things which occurred during the reign of Henry VIII. Thank you, let us be cheerful," I continued.

"Look at the festive Warders, in their red fawn jackets. They are cheerful, and why should it not be thus with us?"

A Warder now took us in charge, and showed us the Trater's Gate, the armers and things.—The Trater's Gate is about five enuff to admit twenty traters a-bout, I should judge; but beyond this, I could not see that it was superior to gates in general.

Traters, I will here remark, are a onfortain class of people. If they wasn't they wouldn't be traters. They conspire to bust up a country—they fall, and they're traters. They bust here, and they become statesmen and heroes.

Take the case of Gloucester, afterward Old Dick the Three, who may be seen at the Tower, or horseback, in a heavy tin overcoat—take Mr. Gloucester's case. Mr. G. was a conspirator of the basist dye, and if he'd failed, he would have been hung on a sour apple tree. But Mr. G. succeeded and became great. He was allowed by Col. Richmond, but he lives in history, and his equestrian flager may be seen daily for a six-pence, in conjunction with other eminent persons, and no extra charge for the Warder's able and bootiful lecture.

There's one king in this room who is mounted onto a foamin steed, his right hand grasping a barber's pole. I didn't learn his name.

The room where the daggers and pistols and other weppins is kept is interesting. Among this collection of choice cutlery I noticed the bow and arrow which those hot-headed old chaps used to conduct battles with. It is quite like the bow and arrow used, at this day by certain tribes of American Indians, and they shoot on off with such an excellent precision that I almost signed to be a Injun, when I was in the Rocky Mountain region. They are a pleasant lot, them Injuns. Mr. Cooper and Dr. Catlin have told us of the red man's wonderful eloquence, and I found it so. Our party was stopt on the plains of Utah by a band of Shoshones, whose chief said, "Brothers! the peace pipe is welcome. Brothers! the sun is sinking in the West, and we are bucky-ash will soon cease speakin. Brothers! we belong to a race that belongs to a race which is fast becomin extinct. He that whooped in a shrill manner, stole all our blankets and whiskey, and fled to the priveral forest to conceal his emotions.

I will remark here while on the subject of Injuns, that they are in the main a very shabby set, with even less sense than the Fenians, and when I hear philanthropists bewailin the fact that every year "carries the noble red man nearer the settin sun," I simply have to say that I am glad of it, tho' it is rough on the settin' sun. They call you by the sweet name of brother one minute, and the next they scalp you with their Thomas-hawks. But I wander. Let us return to the Tower.

At one end of the room, where the weppins is kept, is a very stiffer of Queen Elizabeth, mounted on a very stout horse, whose glass eye flashes with pride, and whose red morocco nostril dilates bravely, as if conscious of the royal burden he bears. I have associated Elizabeth with the Spanish Armada. She's mixed up with it at the Surrey Theater, where "Troo to the Core" is being acted, and in which a full balli core is introduced on board the Spanish Admiral's ship, givin the audience the idea that he intends openin a moose hall in Plymouth the moment he conkers the town. But a very interesting drummer is "Troo to the Core" notwithstanding the conduct of the Spanish Admiral; and very nice it is in Queen Elizabeth to make Martin Trugood a baronet.

The Warder showed us some instruments of torture, such as thumb-screws, throat-collars, etc., stating that these were concocted from the Spanish Armada, and added what a cruel people the Spaniards was in them days, which elicited from a bright-eyed little girl of about twelve summers the remark that tho' it was rich to talk about the cruelty of the Spaniards upon thumb-screws, when we was in a tower where so many mummy poor people's heads had been cut off. This made the Warder stammer and turn red.

I was so pleased with the little girl's brightness that I could have kissed the dear child, and I would if she had been six years older.

I think my companion intended making a day off, for they all had sandwiches, sausage, etc. The sad looking man who had wanted us to drop a tear afore we started to go round, flung six quantities of sausage into his mouth, that I expected to see him choke himself, with death. He said to me, in the Bockham Tower, where the poor prisoners will their unhappy games on the cold walls. "This is a very sad sight."

"It is, indeed," I answered. "You're black in the face. You shouldn't eat sausage in public without some rehearsal beforehand. You manage it awkwardly."

"No," he said, "I mean this sad room."

Indeed, he was quite right. Tho' so long ago these things happened, I was very glad to get away from this gloomy room and go where the rich and sparkling Crown Jewels is kept. I was so pleased with the Queen's Crown that I secured to me what a agreeable surprise it would be to send a similar one home to my wife, and I asked the Warder what was the value of a good, well-conditioned Crown like that. He told me, but on offerin up with a pencil the amount of funs I have in the Joint Stock Bank, concluded I'd send for a genteel silver watch instead.

And so I left the Tower. It is a solid and commanding edifice, but I deny that it is cheerful. I bid it adieu without a pang.

I was driven to my hotel by the most melancholy driver of a four-wheel that I ever saw. He heaved a deep sigh as I gave him two shillings. "I'll give you six shillings more," I said, "if it hurts you so."

"It isn't that," he said, with a heart-rendin groan, "it's only a way I have. My mine's up-to-day. I at one time tho' I'd drive you into the Thames, I've been reading all the cleadly papers to try and understand about Governor Ayre, and my mind is totterin. It's really wonderful I didn't drive you into the Thames."

I asked the unhappy man what his number was, so I would ridly find him in case I should want him agin, and he broke him good-bye. And then I tho' what a frolicsome day I'd made of it.

Respectfully, &c., ARTEMUS WARD.
