

THE SENTINEL.

W. E. PELL, Editor. SEATON CALMS, Editor. Tuesday Evening, Dec. 11, 1866.

What will Congress do?

This is a question which perplexes the whole country and people, but none more so than the Congress itself. The rejection of the plan of the President is far more easy than to provide a better one, or one at all.

Great fears have been excited in regard to violent measures on the part of Congress. That body will do what it can safely to circumscribe and fetter the Southern States. It will not, however, jeopardize the influence and power of the Republican party.

1. It will not impeach the President. 2. It will not attempt to throw the Southern States back into a territorial condition. That would increase the patronage of the President; abrogate the States from their indebtedness; relieve them from taxation for the support of even their territorial governments.

3. It will do nothing to excite the public sympathy either for the President or the Southern States. 4. It will not directly supersede the present State governments, and establish provisional governments after the fashion of those formed by the President. This would be a blow at themselves. The results would be the same in both cases.

5. Nor will it adopt the new programme of assuming that the amendment on its receiving three-fourths of the votes of the Northern States, is part of the Constitution. Congress will not risk anything so glaringly unconstitutional, that can easily be brought to the test of the U. S. Supreme Court. Our opinion, therefore, is, that it will resolve upon adhering to the Constitutional amendment as the sine qua non of the reconstruction of the Southern States. It will do this, with the certain expectation that the Southern States will continue to refuse to adopt the amendment, and thus it will throw upon them the burden of remaining out of Congress and prevent their participation in the next Presidential election.

So far as Congress can continue to harass us by law and afflict and degrade us, may be looked for, as far as it can go without exciting sympathy for us.

The Latter Day Saints. This expression is applied by the "Red String" crew, to those who manifestly stood for the cause of Southern independence until resistance was useless, and then accepted the situation in good faith. This term too they use anonymously with "secessionists," by way of reproach. It is a little remarkable that the most abusive men in the nation of secessionists, are those who were foremost in secession. Witness, Greely, Wade, Stanton at the North, and Hamilton and Holden at the South. And yet these claim to be the true Union men! Perhaps, there is not a more bitter, so-called, original Union man in this State, and one more abusive of secessionists in his way, than Mr. Blair, one of the Commissioners from Randolph. Though a small man, he stands about the equal in intelligence and in bitterness along with the best of his clique. And yet we are credibly informed, before the war began, he was one of the most violent freighting secessionists in all the region round about Trap Hill. Mr. Blair was engaged in wagoning produce to South Carolina, and at a very early period took the secession fever in the natural way and had it good. Would any one believe it now, that this same Mr. Blair on one of his last trips from South Carolina, before the war broke out, came back with the secession cockade in his hat, breathing fire and sword against the Yankees? We are told, he boldly declared, about that time, that if North Carolina did not secede, he would leave the State. We should not be surprised, if among the Howard amendment men in the Legislature, there are not half of them of the same stripe. And yet they tauntingly call the true men of the State, latter day secessionists and secessionists. We should like to get up a roll of these workhorses in the State, to stand along side of Holden and Blair.
