

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.
For established subscribers
in the following terms:
One month, $1.00.
Two months, .
Six months, .
One year, .
Semesterly, one year, .
Weekly or annual, .
Six months, .

THE SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, SEAGRAM & SONS, PUBLISHERS.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 15, 1867.

OF THE SOUTHERN STATES.

The poor Negroes, whose farms have been seized, have been reduced by the systematic captures made by Agents of Congress, and others, and are scattered in Western lands. In the South, the Southerners, the very class of population most needed. The slaves of the Western lands have been kept from their homes, most deprecating their rights. At Eastern lands, Southern emigrants, some society have been represented, and producing thousands of industrious and substantial farmers to seek an adopted home in the Northwest, instead of seeking better opportunity in the South. A few, myself speculating habits, with some means, have come among us, to seek rich quickly upon cotton, but have had no idea of making a home among us, while the actual laboring man has been induced to go elsewhere.

One of the most common and effective efforts to prevent peaceful and industrious people from coming among us—the only kind of migration that is really desirable—is the daily publication of totally unfounded stories as to the safety of travel and living among us. Our quiet people have been represented as hyenas—ready to tear and slay every traveler that comes along, and to tally unwilling either to give employment or to sell small tracts of land to industrious farmers. It is well known that there is a foundation for these stories, that our people anxiously desire to dispose of their lands to actual and industrious settlers.

There is no cheaper or better land in the world, all things considered, than the cleared and swamp lands of Eastern North Carolina. No portion of the Union is so well adapted to Dutch and German settlers, and to the people of Southern Europe, who are acquainted with the culture of the grape. With the right kind of population, in twenty years it would be made the garden spot of the Union. It is important, therefore, that early steps should be taken to remove these unfounded prejudices from them and to induce them to settle upon and cultivate these lands.

THE PEABODY SOUTHERN FUND. The trustees of the fund given by Mr. Peabody for the education of the South will meet in New York, this week, probably. Their names are Robert C. Winthrop, of Boston; Hamilton Fish, of New York; Brigham Young; Charles P. McIlvane, of Ohio; General T. S. Grant, United States Army; Wm. C. Rives, of Virginia; J. H. Clifford, of Massachusetts; Wm. Atkinson, of South Carolina; Wm. M. Evarts, Esq., of New York; Wm. A. Graham, of North Carolina; Charles Macaulay, of Pennsylvania; Gen. A. H. Hovey, Esq., of Washington; Samuel Weston, of New York; Edward A. Bradford, Esq., of Louisiana; George N. Eaton, of Maryland; and George Peabody Russell, of Massachusetts. Mr. Peabody will doubtless be present. To the generous gift of this great and just the South owes a debt of gratitude.

It is a little singular that, contemporaneous with a statement made in the Sentinel, some days ago, upon the strength of general newspaper reports, that Louisiana had appropriated $30,000 to defray the expense of testing the legality of the Sherman Act before the Supreme Court of the United States, there should have appeared the following paragraph in the New Orleans Times: "The State of North Carolina has made an appropriation of $30,000 to pay the expenses of litigation arising out of the construction bill, and intended to test the constitutionality of that measure. It would be proper for all of the Southern States to do similarly."

We need hardly say that there is no foundation for this announcement. Probably there is as little for the statement relative to the Legislature of Louisiana:

WE ALLIED, on yesterday, to the probable necessity of organizing District No. 6 in the State of North Carolina, in order to secure a future having recently advised peremptorily to allow the people to vote on the question whether the word "whites" should be stricken from its Constitution. The necessary bill grows more imperative. The same feature actually defined a few days since on a direct vote at the State Fair in Washington, in a resolution to be drawn the third day of the next session.

PAST.—The Northern Virginians justify the fact that the Federal swamp lands in peat. The experiment has been sufficiently made, and enterprises are waiting for the results.

THE PRESENT.—Representatives have given several bills which are considered as a purpose to attain till December next, when the present session closes.

The advocates from the West are dressing the whole country in deep sorrow.

AT A SUPPER given by the Hibernian Society of Petersburg, on Monday evening, in honor of St. Patrick's day, the following expressive sentiment was given:

The Old Democrat.—"You break—you may shatter the vase, but the scent of the vase will hang round it still."

BANKRUPT LAW.—Chief Justice Chase, it is said, will not appoint Commissioners in Bankruptcy until the meeting of the Supreme Court in April. Each Commissioner must be a lawyer and be able to take the oaths. They will be appointed for the Congressional Districts, and no person can be appointed for ever.

EDITORIAL CHAT.

BRASIL, NO. 4.

The editor of the Ajunta says that "just now there is more danger of social war, much than too little political." Besides that it is difficult to discern the questions connected with the extraordinary situation in such a manner as to force the dictates of prudence. And, as we are those at the same time engaged in the interests of Brazil, we are ready to perceive and discuss their influences, to judge and to form an opinion of the existing state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class feel themselves compelled to the public disesteem in which they are held, by a license and power which they imagine the existing

state of things and enter upon them, to the best of our knowledge and ability.

Political influences, to judgment and reason of people. The latter class