VOL. II. RALEIGH, N. C., FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 22, 1867. NO. 191.

THE SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, PROPRIETOR.

[From the New York Time, March 18.]

THE CONSTITUTION AND THE CHANGES WROUGHT BY THE REVOLUTION.

Our correspondent, "A Veteran Observer," in a letter published in yesterday's Times, drew attention to the changes in the construction of the Constitution which the rebellion has brought about. He concedes that the Constitution of the United States is not now what it was believed and held to be ten or even five years ago. "The Constitution," he says, "must be construed to meet the wants of the people; hence it is practically changed according to the ideas and wants of the day."

This may be perfectly true. But it is equivalent to saying that the Constitution is a sham,—that our system of Constitutional Government is a failure, and that "the wants of the people,"—the "ideas and wants of the day," constitute the only fundamental law of the land. England has just such a Constitution as that. The opinion of Parliament, the votes of the House of Commons, the will and wants of the people, constitute the "unwritten Constitution," by which England is governed. Our Government is tending to precisely that result. Our Constitution in its theory was intended to be the supreme law,—limiting and restraining the action of the Government in every department, and putting checks and restrictions upon the wants, wishes and will of the people whenever they should transcend its provisions. This is the theory of our form of government. This is the only object and use of a written Constitution. When it ceases to serve that end,—when it ceases to interpose a barrier to popular passion or to regulate and control the action of Congress, or the Executive or the Judiciary, it ceases to perform the practical duty for which it was ordained.

Our correspondent says these are not changes in the Constitution, but only in the construction put upon its provisions. Either this is a distinction without a difference, or else the Constitution is too vague and unmeaning in its terms to have any practical meaning whatever. The Constitution says, for example, that "the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended except when, in case of invasion or rebellion, the public safety may require it." Congress has just authorized the suspension of that writ in ten States. There is no invasion,—there is no rebellion,—and the public safety does not require it; yet the writ is suspended all the same. Is this a mere difference of construction? There is no room for any such difference. The language is just as clear and explicit as it is possible for language to be. There is not a shadow of doubt as to its meaning. There is only one "construction" of it possible:—the suspension of that writ is absolutely prohibited except in one specified case;—that case has not occurred, and yet the writ is suspended. What this means is just this,—the Constitution ad hoc has been repealed, abolished, annulled, by act of Congress.

Precisely the same thing is true of other portions of the fundamental law. It declares that no State shall be deprived of its equal representation in the Senate, without its own consent. But ten States are thus deprived of all representation, in either House of Congress, not only without their consent, but against their earnest and indignant protest. Is this a difference of construction? Nobody pretends anything of the kind. Congress claims that the Constitution never contemplated such a state of things as now exists, and that therefore this prohibition has no effect. But this is sheer nonsense. The Constitution provides for every case that can arise, and for every state of things that can exist. Its language is general, and its binding force is absolute and universal. The plea cited means simply that Congress may dispense with the Constitution whenever it pleases, provided the people will sustain it in so doing. In other words, the Constitution is the supreme law of the land, except when the will of the people sustains Congress in overriding and overruling it. Then it becomes simply so much waste paper.

"Everything done by Congress to suppress the rebellion," says our correspondent, "is found in the Constitution, and more would have been found if necessary." Unquestionably! But this is only a roundabout way of saying that the will of Congress became the supreme law of the land, and the provisions and prohibitions of the Constitution vanished in its presence. Congress did whatever it deemed necessary to be done,—and it continues to do so down to the present hour. The Reconstruction bill of the last session was, in nearly every one of its provisions, in clear and flagrant violation of the Constitution as intended by its framers, as interpreted by the Supreme Court as maintained by every department of the Government hitherto, and as expressed in its clear and explicit language. Yet that bill is the law of the land, and as such will be enforced, because it embodies the "will of the nation, which has become a "higher law" than the Constitution, and as such will control, not only its construction, but its application to the practical government of the country.

We may just as well look this matter in the face. It is quite useless to ignore the plain and palpable fact that the rebellion and the war have revolutionized our government. We are not living now under the Constitution of 1789, but under an unwritten Constitution which represents the national will as embodied in the action of Congress. The limitations of the old Constitution have ceased to have binding force. Congress exercises a power never conferred upon it, and denies to States rights expressly reserved to them by the Constitution.—And it does so with perfect impunity, because there is no authority to overrule or control its action. The President is powerless, because two thirds of Congress are against him. The Supreme Court is powerless, because the case cannot come up for its action, and even if it should the Court has no means of enforcing its decrees. The people are without remedy, because ten States are not allowed any voice in the matter, and the remainder sustain the usurped authority. We are living under a de facto government—a government resting on force, and on the will of the people who wield it, but an actual government nevertheless.

President Johnson attempted at the outset of his administration to carry on the government under the Constitution of the United States as it existed before the war,—respecting all its limitations and restrictions of power,—conceding to States all the rights it guaranteed, and carrying on the Government within the channels and upon the grooves which it provides. The attempt proved a failure. The popular resentment against the rebellion, the sense of exultation at the victory achieved over it, the demand for guarantees, for new liberties, larger powers and more permanent sectional and party control, were too strong to be resisted. The war had wrought a revolution in public sentiment which in its turn wrought a corresponding revolution in the practical administration of the Government. Congress represents that revolution to-day and acts under its inspiration and in the exercise of power which it confers.

This is the actual state of public affairs. It is perhaps wiser to adjust our public action to it than to waste strength and time in contending against it. There certainly is but one tribunal remaining to which an appeal can be taken. The people may possibly reverse their own action and decide to stand by the Constitution rather than the revolution by which it has been for the time supplanted. We shall know whether they will or not after the Presidential election of 1868. Until then, at all events, we must live under the de facto government which now holds possession of supreme power.

The Confederate settlement at Cordova is among the things of the past. The departure of General Price has been chronicled. Harris has left for Havana. General Shelby still remains at Cordova, and probably will for several months. Governor T. C. Reynolds, of Missouri, will stay in the city of Mexico. General T. C. Hindman will leave for the United States, and it is his intention to practice law in Memphis or merchandise in New York.

NOTICE!

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

There will be a vessel to sail from the port of Wilmington, on or about the third of April, bounded Bolivia, Venezuela, for the purpose of taking out any emigrants that may go to look or locate. Passage 30s in coin or its equivalents.

I have land titles to give to all Confederate soldiers, (1289 acres;) who will go, and passage for the above sum. I have reserved stock to sell to any other person for $168, including passage out.

I will say, for the information of parties that there have been for Venezuela, since November last, the rise of 2,80 emigrants.

Dr. H. M. Price, and some of the Directors, are now on their way out to hold elections and frame the government.

There have been 40,000 shares of stock in this Company sold to a Banking-house in England, which will soon enable the Company to carry into effect their design of putting on a line of steamers from the Southern States to Bolivia. This town has about 7,000 inhabitants, one half of whom are English. Mules and oxen can be purchased very low.

WE OFFER TO THE PUBLIC THIS CELEbrated Oil, and in doing so we unhesitatingly pronounce it SUPERIOR to any BURNING OIL in Use. It is Non-Explosive. Free from Grease. It will not grease the lamps. It will not soil or grease the clothing. It is more brilliant than Gas. It produces a soft and beautiful light. It is not so trying to the eyes. It can be used in any Kerosene Lamp by adopting our LIGHT HOUSE OR RATCHET BURNER.

It has been most favorably received, and pronounced by judges to be the

BEST AND MOST RELIABLE OIL

now in the market; and in consequence of the many serious accidents arising from the EXPLOSION OF KEROSENE, this Oil is extensively known and used in preference.

We are now prepared to furnish the trade with this valuable Oil, and we solicit from the public an examination and trial.

We have on hand a large stock of

and can supply the trade on liberal terms.

First Premium Awarded at the Louisiana state Fair held in New Orleans, from Nov. 20 to 27th, 1866, against all Competitors.

J. L. HATHAWAY AND UTLEY.

(Formerly HATHAWAY & Co., Importers of MOLASSES and SUGAR, Wilmington, N. C.)

Shipping and Commission Merchants,

171 PEARL STREET, NEW YORK.

We solicit consignments of Cotton, Naval Stores, Shootings, Yarns, Tobacco, and other Southern Products, to the sale of which our prompt personal attention will be given. We will make liberal advances upon receipt of Invoice and Bill of Lading. All Merchandise and Produce shipped to us for sale are insured from point of shipment, with or without notice. Interest should always accompany sight draft.

Both of us having had over twenty years experience in business in the South, and our J. L. HATHAWAY three years in New York, we feel confident we can secure full prices for our friends who will favor us with their consignments.
