THE SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, PROPRIETOR.

CENTRAL AFRICA—THE GORILLA, &c., &c.

M. De Chaillu, a native of Paris, but a naturalized citizen of this country, resolved, about twelve years ago, to make an excursion into the interior of Africa, somewhere in the neighborhood of the Equator, in quarters hitherto untrodden by the feet of white men. From that time to the present he has been almost constantly employed in these explorations, and the result is given in two volumes.

His first meeting with a gorilla he describes as follows:

"Suddenly, as we were creeping along in a silence which made a heavy breath seem loud and distant, the woods were at once filled with the tremendous barking roar of the gorilla. Then the underbrush swayed rapidly just ahead, and presently before us stood an immense male gorilla. He had gone through the jungle on his all-fours, but when he saw our party he erected himself and looked us boldly in the face. He stood about a dozen yards from us, and was a sight I think I shall never forget. Nearly six feet high, (he proved four inches shorter) with immense body, huge chest, and great muscular arms, with fiercely glaring large, deep grey eyes, and a hellish expression of face, which seemed to me some nightmare vision; thus stood before us the king of the African forest. He was not afraid of us.—He stood there and beat his breast with his huge fists till it sounded like an immense bass drum, which is their mode of offering defiance, meantime giving vent to roar after roar."

This monster M. du Chaillu shot, and the body, when measured, proved to be five feet eight inches in height, sixty-two inches round the chest, and nine feet from the extremity of one outstretched arm to the other. He subsequently killed, on this trip, twenty-one of these creatures, the measurement of one of which proved to be larger than that we have just given. The skins and skeletons were brought to this country, and were exhibited for a short time in New York and Boston. Strange to say, they elicited but very little interest, except among a few of our scientific men. They were then taken to England, where they created a great sensation, and M. du Chaillu became one of the lions of the day.—This difference of appreciation of the importance of these discoveries in the two countries can only be accounted for by the publication of his first book, "Adventures in Equatorial Africa," which made its appearance shortly after his arrival in London.

He now spent three years completing his studies in astronomy, botany, and in acquiring the use of instruments, and the art of photography, when he again started on his travels to the same country. Of this latter tour, the work before us is the record.

An accident, shortly after his arrival, resulted in the loss of all his instruments, and he sent back to England for more.

"On the arrival of his second batch of instruments he at once started for the interior, two degrees south of the equator, with the idea of reaching, if possible, some of the confluences of the Nile. He had seven natives from the coast as a bodyguard who accompanied him to the end of his journey. For the transportation of his outfit as was obliged to hire additional men from the different tribes as he went along, to the number of one hundred and fifty. This journey lasted upwards of two years, and was attended with even greater dangers than those which he had encountered in Equatorial Africa. In the Ashira country he was detained for five months by the plague, which broke out about a fortnight after his arrival. The natives attributed the visitation to the influence of his presence; and, to make matters worse, the King, who had steadily befriended him, died of it. M. du Chaillu was the only one who escaped the malady a fact which induced the natives to invest him with the attributes and title of "An Evil Spirit." This proved to him the cause of innumerable difficulties and delayed his progress greatly, the chiefs refusing to see him or listen to his representations. In one district they set fire to the prairie grass, in order to prevent him and his escort passing that way. It would make this article too long were we to follow our traveler through the various other adventures which he encountered on this memorable journey. In regard to its results, we must content ourselves with stating that he added largely to his previous discoveries in geography, meteorology, and, in fact, in every branch of science. The men of the new tribes that he discovered were much larger in stature than those he had met with on the sea shore.—There was one exception however to this rule, that of the Obongo tribe, a most interesting race of dwarfs whom he fell in with towards the end of his journey, and who are probably identical with the pigmies described by Herodotus as living at the headwaters of the Nile. They neither plant nor sow, but lead a nomadic life. Their height is from four feet three to four feet six, and their bodies are covered with tufts of woolly hair. The journey, up to this time so fortunate, terminated disastrously in the "Ashango Land,' which, by the by, gives the title to M. du Chaillu's last book. A gun in the hand of one of his escort went off accidentally and killed two of the natives who were seated near our traveller, and who had just presented him with a goat as a token of friendship. The assembled crowd, fancying that they were about to be attacked and murdered, took to their arms, and a fierce encounter ensued. M. du Chaillu being wounded twice. The fight began at 9 in morning and lasted until 5, the party retreating through the jungle until they got out of the district belonging to the tribe. Unfortunately, in this retreat, M. du Chaillu lost his collections of natural history, photographs and scientific instruments; in fact, almost everything he had with him, with the exception of his journal and astronomical observations, from which his last work has been compiled."

THE RADICAL MACHINE SOUTHWARD.—The Radical Congressional Executive Committee announce that "they are meeting with good success in funds, and nearly every day agents are dispatched to different points in the South." And they might have added that the results of the "funds" and the "agents" are being rapidly developed—for instance in Richmond.—Alexandria Gazette.

The statement that it is necessary to stick a two cent revenue stamp on every egg you set for hatching, has been denied, officially, by the Secretary of the Treasury.

AT THE WONDERFUL REVELATIONS MADE BY THE GREAT ASTROLOGIST,

Madame H. A. PERRIGO.

She reveals secrets no mortal ever knew. She restores to happiness those who, from doleful events, catastrophes, crosses in love, loss of relations and friends, loss of money, &c., have become despondent. She brings together those long separated, gives information concerning absent friends or lovers, restores lost or stolen property, tells you the business you are best qualified in pursue and in what you will be most successful, causes speedy marriages and tells you the very day you will marry, gives you the name, likeness and characteristics of the person. She reads your very thoughts, and by her almost supernatural powers unveils the dark and hidden mysteries of the future. From the stars we see in the firmament—the malefic stars that overcome or predominate in the configuration—from the aspects and positions of the planets and the fixed stars in the heavens at the time of birth, she deduces the future destiny of man. Fail not to consult the greatest Astrologist on earth. It costs you but a trifle, and you may never again have so favorable an opportunity. Consultation free, with likeness and all desired information. If parties living at a distance can consult the Madame by mail with equal safety and satisfaction to themselves, as if in person. A full and explicit chart, written out, with all inquiries answered and likeness enclosed, sent by mail on receipt of price above mentioned. The strictest secrecy will be maintained, and all correspondence returned or destroyed. References of the highest order furnished those desiring them.
