STANTON AND HOLT.

In the autumn of 1861, nearly six months subsequent to the breaking out of the war and some-two months after the battle of Bull Run, Mr. Edwin M. Stanton, late of the War Department, was a leading Democratic politician in Washington, and at that time he denounced, in unsparing and bitter terms, the policy and conduct of the Republican party. A very few months subsequent to this period he became a member of Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet, and then insisted that the Republican party had all the time been pure and patriotic and had been acting in the strictest conformity to the Constitution. He was assigned to the War Department where he is said to have exhibited energy and activity in the business of recruiting, equipping and transporting and supplying the armies, but where he also proved himself to be a compound of brutal passion, pitiless malignity and cold-blooded selfishness. The tyrannical use which he made of power when dealing with the weak and helpless will render his name a word of shame and reproach to this country throughout coming time, and his refusal to exchange prisoners leaves him forever answerable for the privations and sufferings which were endured at Andersonville and elsewhere in the South. The whole truth has not yet been told on this point, but the charge against him will be one day overwhelmingly proven, never more to be disputed. Some of the witnesses are those of his own household. Among their statements the following one, made by Mr. Brown, of the New York Tribune, is conclusive. He says:

"Mr. Richardson and myself spent nearly a week in the national capital after our escape, endeavoring to do all that was possible for the release of the five brave men in the hands of the enemy; and every one we met there told the same story, that the Secretary of War was the obstacle in the way of the resumption of the exchange.—Moreover, Gen. Butler, in his speech at Lowell, Massachusetts, stated positively that he had been ordered by Mr. Stanton to put forward the negro question to complicate and prevent the exchange. Col. A. B. Streight, of Indianapolis, Indiana, a fellow-prisoner with us in the Libby, told Mr. Richardson after our return to freedom, that, in an interview between the Secretary and himself, the former declared to him the Government could not afford to exchange able-bodied men for skeletons. Other officers and civilians, whose names I cannot now remember, assured me that he has used to them the same language in effect; and there is no doubt whatever that that was his policy and his determination until the clamors of the people compelled him to retire from his barbarous position. Every one is aware that, when the exchange did take place, not the slightest alteration had occurred in the question, and that our prisoners might as well have been released twelve or eighteen months before as at the resumption of the cartel, which would have saved to the Republic at least twelve or fifteen thousand heroic lives. That they were not saved is due alone to Mr. Edwin M. Stanton's peculiar policy and dogged obstinacy; and, as I have remarked before, he is unquestionably the digger of the unnamed graves that crowd the vicinity of every Southern prison with historic and never-to-be-forgotten heroes."

If General Grant was in his campaign reckless of human life, something may be forgiven to a man who rode himself in the front of battle. But what an infamous memory does he deserve who, in the safe recesses of his office, coolly consigned to agony and death thousands of those for whom he was hypocritically professing his warmest love and admiration. This treachery to the army was as barbarous as his treachery to his employers has been base and mean. When he first avowed himself a member of the Radical party it is hard to say, but the fact is made known by his own friends that while he has been pertinaciously clinging to his office he has been acting as a spy upon the President. The Philadelphia Press, to which such a business would be very congenial, and whose editor has had, as the world knows, a lively experience in it, is proud of Mr. Stanton's performances in this line, and says it "betrayed no confidence in stating that on more than one occasion the country had been indebted to Edwin M. Stanton, for the timely note of warning that enabled the representatives of the people to meet and defeat the dangerous schemes of a recreant President." How he declined to leave the Cabinet when told that he was an unwelcome member of it, and how he proposed to remain in it to look after the interests of the Union Leagues, black and white, who may, perhaps, nominate him for the Presidency, all men know. But he is out at last, and he has gone, carrying with him the reputation of a corrupt time-server and a petty tyrant, who will deserve all the scorn and hate that is certain, sooner or later, to be generally meted out to him.

When Conover was convicted of the double crime of perjury and subornation of perjury, Judge Holt was found to be so deeply compromised that he deemed it necessary to publish a circular in vindication of his character. That circular was distributed gratuitously and with a free hand all over the country. In it Judge Holt passionately appealed "to the loyal people" of the United States to defend him against Rebel accusers. He besought his partisan admirers not to believe that he was in any way cognizant of Conover's infamous practices; confessed with apparently the deepest humility to having been hoodwinked by Conover, and bitterly denounced, as a perjured villain and a scoundrel, the man whom he had employed as his confidential agent. The defence of Judge Holt—if so weak a thing can be called a defence—only deepened in honest minds the suspicions against him. His published letters addressed to Conover were found so little susceptible of being satisfactorily explained, that, although Judge Holt is an acknowledged master in the artifice of words, it needed the utmost excess of loyalty and the utmost degree of self-stultification on the part of those who were eager to sustain him to blind them to the shallowness of the subterfuges to which he resorted in the attempt to vindicate his conduct, or to accept his explanations otherwise than as convicting him of being particeps criminis on his own showing.

Those who knew Judge Holt most intimately as an astute lawyer, trained to detect deception in all its varied disguises; cool and clear-headed, and with all his faculties sharpened and developed by long practice in his profession, laughed to scorn the notion that a man of his reputation, and so keen and close an observer, should have been deceived, for a single moment, by the gang of perjurers of which Conover was the tutor and the chief. They remembered how during the Fremont campaign this same Judge Holt had been one of the most violent defenders of the rights of the South; how earnestly in the many speeches which he then made he exposed and denounced the designs of the Abolitionists, and with what prophetic accuracy he had predicted all the evils that have ensued from their unpremacy. They remembered, too, that up to the time of the breaking out of the war, and for some short time subsequently, his sympathies were all with the South, and his sudden perversion into a bitter and unscrupulous enemy came upon them like a new revelation. An ally so potent for evil deserved to be rewarded, and a place was found for him, under the Government, where he could best exercise his unquestionable talents in persecuting those whom he had deserted and betrayed. No abler or more serviceable instrument of despotism ever joined hands with the Radicals than Judge Advocate General Holt. No man since the days of Jeffreys and Scroggs was ever more blood-thirsty in his partisanship, or more unprincipled in adapting his means to his ends. His organization of military commissions, and the earnest support which he gave to those illegal tribunals of justice, would alone suffice to make his name notorious through coming generations. But it was in his pursuit of the life of Mr. Davis, and his evident determination to compass it at all hazards and by any agencies, however disreputable they might be, that his partisan malevolence took the color of personal vindictiveness.—It brought him into connection with the man Conover and led to those intimate relations with the miserable gang of self-confessed perjurers whom he subsequently sought to repudiate, but from suspicion of complicity with whom he vainly endeavored to shake himself free. His protestations of innocence, and his fierce denunciations of Conover, find their best commentary in the letter which this same Holt has addressed recently to President Johnson, suggesting the propriety of pardoning the man who had been stigmatized by Holt himself for everything that was vile. When, moreover, as it is plausibly surmised, this application for pardon was based upon the possibility of putting once more the talents of Conover to further infamous uses in impeachment of President Johnson himself, the atrocity of the scheme finds no parallel anywhere, and stamps with indelible infamy the character of the men who were so incorrigibly base as to resort to such heinous devices.

A CHEAP COTTON PRESS.

Having been notified that a patent has been allowed me for a new and improved COTTON PRESS, I offer for sale State, County and individual rights.

This press is offered as containing more advantages for packing Cotton than any now in use. It is adapted to large or small farms; is so simple and cheap in construction that any good mechanic can build it; takes less man and horse-power to work it, with no exposure to the weather, and less waste of Cotton, than any other.

I have permission to offer as references, Messrs. Peter E. Smith, W. H. Smith, D. Edmondson and T. Vaughan, of Scotland Neck N. C., all of whom have used it with great satisfaction on their plantations. Those who put up Screws will be sorry for it.

Reliable agents wanted to sell the rights throughout the Southern Country.

PATENT IMPROVED METHOD OF

SINKING WELLS,

OR

THE NEW LABOR SAVING

ECONOMICAL PUMPS.

HAVING PURCHASED THE ENTIRE AND exclusive right to the patent improved method of sinking Wells, for the State of North Carolina, we desire to have a good and reliable Agent in every county of the State.

As it is desirable for every family to have an abundant supply of water, on their own premises, for convenience, safety and economy, the sale of this Pump offers a fine opening for an enterprising man in each county, to engage in profitable business.

OUR PRICES ARE FOR No. 1 SIZE, $25;

No. 2, $30,

WITH A LIBERAL DISCOUNT TO AGENTS.

We have a No. 2 Pump in operation in front of our Store, No. 22, Pollock Street, which was sunk in an hour, and supplies about 3,000 GALLONS of pure water per day. They can also be seen in operation at the Gaston House, and at other places in Newbern; also at Kinston, Beaufort, Morehead city, and at many other places.

This is the cheapest and most speedy mode of obtaining water in any section, as you can exclude any stream of water reached, which is not satisfactory, and obtain only that which is most desirable.

THE TOBACCONISTS.

It is a well established fact, that TOBACCO well flavored commands a better price and more ready sale than it does when not flavored or but badly so. Such being the case, would it not be to the interest of Manufacturers to use liberally pure flavoring materials, such as
