DAILY SENTINEL.

THE ELECTION IN RICHMOND.

As we have seen in the Richmond Herald, the first time of the right of suffrage for the negro, is of interest, we give the following account from the Richmond Herald, of how things were managed in that city, on Tuesday, even with the bayonets to preserve quiet and order.

The voting (so-called) in Jefferson Ward was conducted in the Mayor's Court. Over one of the front entrances was a board marked "white voters," and over the other a board marked "colored voters," and in front of the side-walk, were two tables side by side, on one of which were two hundred and fifty tickets, and on the other the Conservative tickets. As an early hour, a detachment of the Eleventh Infantry was on the spot, and was posted at the corner of Eighteenth and Main. Long before the doors to the polling-room, were opened a crowd of negroes began to gather around the entrance appropriated to them, and by the time the door was opened a mass of black humanity, densely packed as herrings in a barrel, and squeezing each other with such force that it seemed as if ribs of iron could not stand it, sought admission to record their votes. There was a wild eagerness on their faces, an appearance of intense earnestness, and among them were several who seemed to be the leading spirits, and who kept up a perpetual talking to those around them. The crowd continued to increase every moment, until the street was obstructed, and subsequently the negroes were compelled to form in line along the side-walk from the northeast corner of Seventeenth and Main. Everything went on quietly until about 9 o'clock, when a colored man named Davis signified his intention to vote the Conservative ticket. He was immediately threatened with violence by the negroes within his hearing, and on leaving the polling place and going up Main Street towards the St. Charles Hotel, he was pursued by a mob of negroes, and was struck by a negro fellow named John Crump. In a moment there was a tremendous rush of negroes after Davis, evidently with the view of wreaking summary vengeance on him, when a policeman at the polls gave the alarm, and immediately several officers, attended on duty at the polls, rushed out, accompanied by special officer Tyler. When the police came up, they found Davis surrounded by a furious mob, and endeavored to save him from violence. Many of the negro mob, however, swore that they would take Crump (who had been arrested) out of the hands of the police, and one of them, named Evans Paine, who made himself very conspicuous, swore that he would take any of his party (of the assaulting party) should be taken to the station house, and at the same time he made an effort to rescue Crump from the police. As soon as Paine made this attempt, officer Tyler laid hold of him, but Paine resisted violently, and then officers Smart and Ball and other officers came to Mr. Tyler's assistance. At this moment the scene was one of the wildest excitement, and the police had a most violent struggle in the midst of a furious mob of negroes. This having been observed by Colonel Harzook, the officer in charge of the detachment of troops stationed at the corner of Seventeenth and Main streets, came up promptly at a double-quick with his men, with fixed bayonets, and at the same time a detachment of cavalry came down Main street. The cavalry drew their sabres and the infantry brought their muskets to a charge, so furious was the mob, and after an evident and persistent resistance on the part of the negroes to give up their object, the mob was dispersed, and the police, aided by the military, succeeded in carrying Crump and Paine to the cage. As we have said, the scene was one of the wildest excitement, and notwithstanding the brave and determined conduct of the police, the prisoners would most certainly have been rescued if it had not been for the intervention of the military, for the negro mob was overwhelming, and their intention to rescue the prisoners was most determined. Any one looking at the police in the midst of that furious and fiendish mob must have seen that, if the military had not come up, in a few minutes more their lives would most immediately be endangered. Yet the officers, while they did their duty manfully, did not in any instance use unnecessary violence. The rioters, Paine and Crump, were subsequently sent to the Libby, where they were securely locked up. The military did their duty in a most praiseworthy manner, exhibiting the conduct of well-disciplined soldiers, and using only as much force as was necessary to restore order.

ADMONITIONS TO THE SOUTHERN PRESS.

The Herald says: "We notice in the Southern press a disposition to attach an importance and significance to the late elections in Pennsylvania and Ohio, which the circumstances do not fully warrant. It is true there is in the results of these elections much cause for congratulation to the Southern people, as well as to those of the North, who have become tired and sickened with corrupt radical misgovernment. But our Southern friends should not go off at a tangent upon these signs of a return upon these signs of a return among the radical majorities of the North. They should not hurrah before they are out of the woods. They should keep calm and collected—we will not say 'subdued,' for they have acknowledged themselves so already. They should not be too exultant; they should utter no taunts, make no threats, nor do anything else to arouse the spirit of relentless persecution with which they have been pursued by the radicals since the Congressional project of reconstruction was first broached. The end is not yet. Much remains to be done, and it behooves the Southern people to tax still further the measure of their patience, until the clouds that hover over them are entirely dispelled and they are again blessed with a serene political sky."

THIS COMPANY INSURES TEN YEAR NON-

FORFEITING ENDOWMENT POLICIES,

contracting to pay the amount insured at death or

the specified time.

An endowment policy presents the double advantage of providing for one's family or other dependents in case he should die before a specified age, or of securing to himself, independence, in case he should die after that time.

For ten years, a note for one-half of the stock, payable by paying six per cent interest.

This plan gives, in addition to all the advantages of life insurance, a safe and convenient investment for one's savings, till they have accumulated to a definite amount, which he resolves in one sum at the expiration of the term.
