DAILY SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, Proprietor.

From the Warrenton Indicator.

PETER NEY.

A correspondent of the Raleigh Sentinel has recently stood by the grave of a Frenchman in the County of Rowan, who, he says, always claimed to be the veritable Michael Ney, one of Napoleon's greatest Marshals:

"His own account was, that he was sentenced to death, but that through the interference of friends at Court, the execution was a sham. He was put into a coffin; instead of being buried, he was taken to the coast, thence to America, and that he sought the interior for privacy.

Certain it is, they say, he was a martial figure, a fine French scholar. He taught school in Rowan, and always maintained that he was the genuine Marshal Ney."

We clip this paragraph from the Wilson North Carolinian. The editors refer to the statement of "Itinerant" of the Sentinel and say:

"We have often heard this singular individual spoken of, and it is not altogether improbable that he was what he represented himself. Many people in that section of country earnestly believe it."

So have we heard often about this very remarkable character, and purpose to lay before our readers what a friend twenty years ago told us about him. When at the University of N. C., a gentleman well known for ability and varied accomplishments, was our intimate friend. On several occasions he entertained us with some pleasing reminiscences concerning the strange school-master to whom he went in his younger days. The Frenchman was then teaching, (if we remember aright,) in the county of Cabarrus, some six miles from Concord. He boarded in the family of Mr H——, a brother-in-law of our friend. His name, as he always wrote it, was Peter Ney. He came to North Carolina about the year 1814. He was an accomplished and able man with some striking peculiarities. He was for long years a regular contributor to the National Intelligencer, the only paper he read. His articles bore the impress of a gifted and cultivated mind. He was a noble looking man, his figure and features being alike imposing. He would never receive but a certain sum for teaching. If his school brought in more than the regular amount he was willing to receive, you could not induce him to avail himself of it. He was a good teacher, first rate disciplinarian, but expected his boys to "turn him out" once a year. If they accomplished this feat with skill and courage, he seemed well satisfied; if however, they betrayed timidity and awkwardness in their attempt, he took offence. Another feature in his government, was his promptness to flog a boy if he was known to tamely accept an insult. He admired boldness and intrepidity of spirit. Now and then, once or twice a year, he indulged himself in drink. He lived to a green old age, and just before his death, burned every paper that was of any interest or could throw light upon his mysterious antecedents. He was a worshipper of the great Napoleon, and when the news came that his son was dead, the old school-master went to bed and grieved for a week. He was in constant correspondence with distinguished personages in France, the letters he received always being sealed with wax and stamped with a coat-of-arms indicating rank. He had a magnificent gold pencil case, surmounted with a huge head, the engravings and seal of which proved it to have once been the property of some royal or other person eminent for rank. He acknowledged that he had been a soldier of Napoleon, and was in the fatal retreat from Moscow. He was thoroughly familiar with all of Napoleon's campaigns. On one occasion, he drew a plan of the battle of Waterloo upon the smooth sand bank of a stream recently at freshet, and being under the influence of liquor, pointed out where his command was, saying that he was Marshal Ney. He minutely described the action and pointed out the mistakes of the English historians in their accounts of that decisive battle. He afterwards told the two gentlemen, to whom he made the confession, to forget what he had said.—This, according to our recollection, our informant said, was the only time he ever set up any claim of being the brilliant Marshal of the Empire. We will mention one other circumstance connected with this uncommon character. When bent with age, he overheard an Irishman abusing Napoleon.—He fired up at once, and straightening himself to his full height, with quivering lip and flashing eye, he asked the Irishman if he knew anything about the quarter staff. An affirmative reply being given, he and the offender were soon hard at it, and after a few passes or licks, the Irishman fell sprawling under a heavy blow from the fiery Frenchman's staff. Our friend did not know how to regard his old school-master. Whether he was the genuine Marshal Ney or not, he could not say, but that he was a very remarkable character there could not be any doubt.

One word more as to Marshal Ney's death. Our friend once relating the particulars of Peter Ney's life in N. C. to Colonel Laurinouski, a Pole, who fought under Napoleon with distinction, but afterwards a Lutheran preacher in the United States, found in him an exceedingly attentive listener. The Colonel was clearly of the opinion that Marshal Ney was never shot, but escaped after a mock death, to this country. He was anxious to see Peter Ney, and felt satisfied that he could easily identify him, if really he were the great Marshal. But they never met. The school-master died, and the mystery connected with his life lies buried with him. There is now none to make it plain.

We have written after nearly years have passed since we first heard the particulars given above. We have tried to be accurate in our recollection, but may, in some particulars, have varied from the story as we heard it. Pitts Mize, a traveller from the North, visited Western North Carolina once, for the purpose of investigating all the circumstances and particulars connected with Peter Ney. We met him afterwards, and he told us that there was a great deal of evidence to establish the identity of Peter Ney with Michael Ney, the Marshal of France. If our friend, who we are glad to know is fond of letters, and occasionally contributes excellent articles to the Land We Love, will take as his next theme, "Peter and Michael Ney Identical," or "Marshal Ney identified in the strange French school master of Cabarrus," he will be able no doubt to throw more light upon the subject than any other living writer can throw. We hope to see yet from his facile and graceful pen, some reminiscences of the remarkable old man who taught him in his boyhood.

Now a few words to my customers and friends: You see a great many different styles of advertisements. Some say they are in "luck again;" some say they have "hit the nail on the head;" some "selling out at cost;" some to "make room for a new stock;" some one thing, and some another. But allow me to say, whether I am in luck, or whether I hit the nail on the head, or whether I missed the nail entirely, or failed to advertise "selling out at cost," I have sold out my old stock, (while they are still hammering away over their old stock,) and have been North and bought a new stock. My goods are now in Store, and opened for inspection.

COME AND LOOK AT THEM.

I told my customers, six months ago, that I would sell goods as cheap as Yankee, Jew or Gentile, and I think I have made my word good.

I told the people to come to Creech's to buy their goods, that I would serve them right. Hundreds have come, and they are still coming from this and adjoining Counties. And I here take the privilege to say, I think they have shown their good judgment.

Don't forget to come to Great attention paid to consignments of Cotton, Corn, Wheat, Rosin, &c. &c. All produce forwarded at the lowest possible rates.

☞ To insure transportation over this Inland Fast Line, mark all goods, whether Northward or Southward bound, "Via Petersburg."
