DAILY SENTINEL,

WM. E. PELL, Proprietor.

From the New York World.

GENERAL HANCOCK.

The prudence and patriotism with which Gen. Hancock is administering the affairs of his department attest the wisdom of President Johnson in displacing his predecessor. General Grant's intemperate remonstrance was more creditable to the fidelity of his friendship than to the soundness of his judgment. While Sheridan was in command the department was never quiet. That meddlesome officer resembled the unfortunate people who never have good neighbors. He found himself under a constant necessity of doing strong acts; and the protests against his removal assumed that the department was so full of turbulent, mutinous spirits that only his vigorous hand could hold them in subjection. But when he left the rebellious spirits seemed to depart with him, as the peace of a neighborhood is restored when the unfortunate family that always has bad neighbors moves away. General Sheridan's removal, which, it was asserted, before it took place, would make him the next President, is much more likely to confer that honor upon his successor, if Gen. Hancock continues to evince the consummate civil prudence he has thus far exhibited. It bids fair to place him among the small number from whom the Democratic candidate will be selected, while Sheridan's supposed claims have gone into a total eclipse.

For our part, we hope that a statesman of large civil experience may be run by both parties. We are not likely to need military abilities; or if we should, the Presidential mansion is not a fit place for the headquarters of a fighting army. Great measures of civil policy and administrative reform should stand in the foreground under the next President. There is no fitness in choosing a mere military man to discharge duties requiring great civil experience. But if the Republicans attempt to sway the canvass by the ecloat of a military name it may be expedient to neutralize the effort by putting a popular military name into the other scale. If this necessity should be forced upon us, an accidental advantage may result from the Republican reconstruction scheme by affording a field to test the civil capacity of one of our most admired and meritorious soldiers.

The standing electioneering calumny of the Republicans, that every man who disapproves of their negro policy is rebel at heart, recoils against its authors when levelled at so bright a reputation as General Hancock's. For loyalty, gallantry, zeal, activity, and the solid value of his services, there was no officer in the Union army, who, with equal opportunities, left so shining a record. If he had ever had a separate command, he might have acted a more prominent, but he could not easily have acted a more brilliant part. Separate commands were lavished on officers of a different school of politics. The Republican Banks had a separate command both in the Valley and in Louisiana, and he acquired everything but honor in both.—The renegade Democrat, Butler, had separate commands, and made himself a butt of derision. Pope had a separate command, and his incompetency was demonstrated by the second Bull Run. Burnside had a separate command, and the result was his useless slaughter of our troops at Fredericksburg. Hooker had a separate command, and the result was his disgraceful defeat at Chancellorsville. The Conservative Meade was promoted to a separate command by accident and a necessity. He won the great victory of Gettysburg and was again subordinated. Democratic officers, who were not servile enough to renounce or dissemble their principles, had no fair chance in the army. The crushing of Gen. McClellan by political malice was a warning which disclosed to ambitious army officers a fatal rock in the channel of promotion.

Although General Hancock never had a separate command while the war lasted, there were but few directors of armies who blazed into such distinction as this brilliant subordinate. The Army of the Potomac, in which he served, always ranked as the first of our armies, and Hancock as one of its brightest ornaments. His purity of character, his patriotic ardor, his gallantry, alacrity, abilities, modesty, and good fortune, acquired for him a reputation which was never sullied by one breath of suspicion or one word of censure. Whenever it is said that Conservative politics are inconsistent with vigorous, devoted loyalty, it is a sufficient reply to point to General Hancock, the esteemed and gallant representative of hundreds of Democratic officers, and hundreds of thousands of Democratic soldiers. The surviving soldiers of the Army of the Potomac feel for him a warmth of admiring regard which the colder character of Gen. Grant never kindled; and the people share the feeling.

General Hancock has thus far proved himself as judicious in peace as he was brave and brilliant in war. Under his administration there have been no New Orleans riots; no insubordination in civil officers to give him trouble; no disaffection to his person, though he fills a most unwelcome office. He resorts to no strong measures because the considerate equity of his administration disarms opposition. The turbulent and rebellious population which it was said that no hand, less formidable than Sheridan's, could control, and which he hardly succeeded in controlling by his constant acts of rigor and summary dismissals, is so spontaneously orderly and quiet under Hancock that, to all appearance, he could govern as effectually without an army as with. This contrast, so creditable to Hancock, illustrates the superiority of the Democratic method of dealing with the South. If General Hancock, when sent to execute an odious law, can govern with so little friction how easily might loyalty be maintained in the South if the policy of the government as well as its officers were conciliatory!

To illustrate the temper of General Hancock's administration, and his steadfast fealty to law, we copy the following statement from the New Orleans Picayune:

"On Saturday night a father and son, known respectively in the community by the names of Simon H. Frank and Wallesche and Edward F. Wallesche, who for several months past have been proprietors of the wash and planing mills, called the Mariposa Mills, on St. Joseph street, were arrested by the police under a warrant issued by Governor Flanders, who had received a requisition for them from the Governor of the State of New York, they being indicted in the City of New York, it is alleged, with obtaining goods from merchants there, about eighteen months ago, to the amount of $100,000, by false pretences.

Saturday night Judge Cotton, counsel for the accused, sued out, before Judge Theard, a writ of habeas corpus, returnable this morning at 10 o'clock. It appears, however, that General Hancock learned late last evening of the simple fact of the issuance of the writ by a court of competent jurisdiction, and of the probability, under peculiar attendant circumstances, that the writ was not to be respected. He at once went in person to the office of Chief of Police, about 6:30 o'clock, and told Major Williamson that he had learned that a writ of habeas corpus had been issued, and that owing to some illegality it was probable that it would not be obeyed. He will hold you responsible in this matter. These prisoners must be produced. I believe you will produce them, but I will myself take the necessary precaution that they be produced. I have issued an order that the writ of habeas corpus is to be observed, and it shall be. I am here to protect the dignity of government, and the rights of the people as to life, liberty, and property must be preserved. So long as I am in power here, the law shall be respected. I know nothing, Mr. Chief of Police, about this case; do not know what these men are charged with; but it is sufficient for me to know, and you to know, that a writ of habeas corpus has been issued, and that writ shall be respected. I will sink the boat in the middle of the river with cannon that takes these men on board, and intercept any train of cars that carries them. If the law is not observed, who and what is safe? I may be taken away, you may be, any of us may be. Justice must be upheld. I hold you, therefore, Mr. Chief of Police, responsible for the delivery of these men before Judge Theard, in obedience to that writ.'

The General then took his departure, and we felt as though we had listened truly to the defender of law and dignity of government. We don't remember of ever having witnessed a more impressive scene."

The proceedings in this case of requisition may be all regular and the grounds of the arrest sufficient. Those are points on which General Hancock need have no opinion. But it is important that citizens of his district should feel that they cannot be dragged from their homes on criminal charges and taken to a distant State to be tried, without good reasons. All that the habeas corpus will accomplish is to secure an examination of the grounds of arrest before an upright judge. If the arrest is warranted by the facts and papers, he will restore the prisoners to custody. But the firmness with which General Hancock sustains the writ, assures every innocent man in his district that innocence will insure protection at the hands of the local courts. What General Hancock establishes is a government of law, not of arbitrary force.

To the Bond Holders of the North Carolina Rail Road Company.

Office N. C. Railroad Company,

COMPANY SHOPS, N. C.,

Nov. 9th, 1867.

MOST OF YOU HAVING AGREED WITH MY predecessor, Mr. Welch, to take care for your old bonds, I take this method of informing you we are now ready for the exchange.

To capitalists I would say, we will sell $500,000 of eight per cent. coupon bonds, secured by mortgage on the Road, and payable in five, ten, or twenty years, as the purchaser may desire,—interest payable semi-annually.

The debt of the Company is about $700,000.—Bonds to fund this debt will be issued.

The property mortgaged to secure the payment of these bonds is worth in currency seven millions of dollars. There can be no better security.

The bonds will be sold cheap at par.
