

MACKINAW
100' long in crooked or convex shape
MACKINAW SHIP
THE RIA GUARD
VOL. III. NO. 18.
DAILY SENTINEL.

The Daily Sentinel.

RALEIGH, N. C., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1868.

PEETERSBURG ADVERTISEMENTS

THOMAS SMITH,
NO. 26 Sycamore Street,

PETERSBURG, Va.

THE LARGEST STOCK OF
DRY GOODS
IN THE STATE OF VIRGINIA.

IN PRESENTING MY KIND PATRONS WITH A handsome stock for Fall Trade, I hope this collection to them for their judicious personal selection, at the same time future merchants may understand it and may therefore be induced to follow up my example.

As far as all who commence trading in the market, the first of all, we offer our friends no discrimination, whether they will do much or very little business, and we will be equally indifferent to those who will buy and sell and those who will buy and not sell.

The manifest design of the Bankrupt is to serve the public, and we will be equally indifferent to those who will buy and sell
and those who will buy and not sell.

Knowing that gentlemen to be emphatically a man of his word, I know he must have said so here goes for a little chit en-matters and things in general, and Charlotte matters in particular.

In this goodly town, the distinction wonderful, Cotton is known as a king, every inch of him.

The two-wheeled wagon

plied up with bales past my cottage gate this morning, and, with the hope that I might effect a small speculation, I despatched my hasty maid to ask the price per pound.

The owner, a tall, gaunt man, who looked as if he had both been and done services, replied coolly: "Highest market price."

You can take that as the last quotation of the Charlotte cotton market."

I told you, last summer, if you good people of the City of Oaks did not take care, we of Charlotte would not only catch up with you, but pass you by, in the race of municipal prosperity, and facts are corroborated the assertion.

I know Tucker (why did not those enterprising gentlemen omit that name?) is hard to beat, but so is the handsome building which ornaments our city, and affords positive proof of the energy and taste of its proprietors and protectors, Messrs. Oates &

Saunders, under the title of "Oates Hall."

The gay young bachelors of Charlotte gave a grand house-warming in this Hall, some weeks ago, in the shape of a ball.

It was given in compliment to two ladies, and though I did not attend, I furnished a substitute, and am informed that, of all the elegant entertainments given this season,

"Bachelors' Ball" was by far the chief.

To-night, the last of the carnival—put at end to the gaiety, and, with to-morrow begins the antedict of the ecclesiastical season, in which we commemorate the trials and temptations of Him who gave himself as a ransom for us all.

I think no one can faithfully observe this solemn time, in which one withdraws from the world to hold communion with the Father of Spirits, without feeling, at its close, that indeed "Angels came and ministered unto him."

Angels suggest their antidotes. What good times all must be having in Raleigh, just now!

The component parts of the noble assembly at the Bankrupt's trial received one of the most eloquent oration in Macbeth.

Oh! for a fine Due to "lay on" till every one of the mongred mass was reduced to his appropriate station! The you, think one voice could be found here "angony!"

I was anxious, and at the same time made so by the sight of an illustrated article emanating, not long since, from Baltimore.

It appeared in a paper once published, now printed, in your city, and which at one time was considered one of the standard productions of the State.

This article amused me by being exactly suited to the colored calibre of those for whose coarse comprehension it was intended, and yet made me sorry to see such a pitiable failing off in one, who was once held to be a man of some force and vigor in editorial affairs.

He did not intend to praise those against whom this attack was directed, yet paid them, and the cause they advocated, the highest possible compliment. In keeping the utmost respect, he could possibly procure, on the public lives and services of the gentlemen he assailed, he could find no subject for blame except the way in which they held their "hats" and carried their "umbrellas."

If it be necessary, let me review each other's actions, and then, with good heart, I will say, but for the sake of mind, manners and morals, do not let us go to war again with "the old university."

The success of the article contained, relative to the safety of our southern seacoast to make sailors of the land before which sustained us all, were beyond calculation, and only resulted in him who made them.

That individual had better let lions alone, whether dead or living ones! He thought none of the greatest of them was dead some time ago, and actually dared to kick him! He was not at all dead, only caged, and after a while he became free, and if his kickers do not care, he will, in

Western parlance, be "waterously chewed up" in this kind of the forest! The Lion roared the other night in our city, and as usual, turned the hearts of the people just as he chose. Long may he live, and much good may he continue to do his native State, who has such right to love him!

The night previous to his greatest appearance, he had better let lions alone, whether dead or living ones! He

thought none of the greatest of them was

dead some time ago, and actually dared to

kick him! He was not at all dead, only

caged, and after a while he became free, and

if his kickers do not care, he will, in

Western parlance, be "waterously

chewed up" in this kind of the forest! The

Lion roared the other night in our city, and

as usual, turned the hearts of the people just as he chose. Long may he live, and

much good may he continue to do his

native State, who has such right to love him!

The night previous to his greatest appearance, he had better let lions alone,

whether dead or living ones! He

thought none of the greatest of them was

dead some time ago, and actually dared to

kick him! He was not at all dead, only

caged, and after a while he became free, and

if his kickers do not care, he will, in

Western parlance, be "waterously

chewed up" in this kind of the forest! The

Lion roared the other night in our city, and

as usual, turned the hearts of the people just as he chose. Long may he live, and

much good may he continue to do his

native State, who has such right to love him!

The night previous to his greatest appearance, he had better let lions alone,

whether dead or living ones! He

thought none of the greatest of them was

dead some time ago, and actually dared to

kick him! He was not at all dead, only

caged, and after a while he became free, and

if his kickers do not care, he will, in

Western parlance, be "waterously

chewed up" in this kind of the forest! The

Lion roared the other night in our city, and

as usual, turned the hearts of the people just as he chose. Long may he live, and

much good may he continue to do his

native State, who has such right to love him!

The night previous to his greatest appearance, he had better let lions alone,

whether dead or living ones! He

thought none of the greatest of them was

dead some time ago, and actually dared to

kick him! He was not at all dead, only

caged, and after a while he became free, and

if his kickers do not care, he will, in

Western parlance, be "waterously

chewed up" in this kind of the forest! The

Lion roared the other night in our city, and

as usual, turned the hearts of the people just as he chose. Long may he live, and

much good may he continue to do his

native State, who has such right to love him!

The night previous to his greatest appearance, he had better let lions alone,

whether dead or living ones! He

thought none of the greatest of them was

dead some time ago, and actually dared to

kick him! He was not at all dead, only

caged, and after a while he became free, and

if his kickers do not care, he will, in Western parlance, be