VOL. III. THE DAILY SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, PROPRIETOR.

THE NEW REGIME.

It is understood that the Committee of Managers, which, as a secret inquisition, sits daily in the Capitol, with Gen. Butler at the head, has used its power to inspect the production of the deposit accounts of various individuals at one of the banks in this city. Bank books are said to have been inspected, not in a court, not in an open committee-room, nor even before the packed star chamber as a whole, but privately and alone, at dead of night, by this Butler—a man whose very name is an adjective stronger than any we could employ. How far this prying investigation was extended none can tell, nor to how many of the opponents of Radicalism the indignity of an inspection of their private business was offered. Such a practice as this tramples not only on every private right, but it is in the highest sense annoying and injurious to the business portion of the community. Once tolerated and endured here, the outrage will be extended to other cities, and made the vehicle of corrupt or malicious proceeding by Radicals towards their conservative rivals in business, and even to wards each other.

This matter involves very serious reflection for our whole business community, and it behoves them to consider what steps they shall take to protect themselves against a practice so monstrous.

How far in this to extend! By whom are the spies and menial servants that dog Senators, private gentlemen, and even women, paid? Does it come from the Federal Treasury, or from the Grant electioneering fund, or from the body of New Orleans? The people want light. They want to know what authority all the despots, public and private, sent from this city on Friday last, have been seized, and laid before this committee. If the despots of Friday are not sacred, then those of the past month, or twelve months—nay, all those sent or to be sent in any city of the Union, are the pleasure and property of the General's managers, with the prying Butler at their head. And if all despots are to be subject to Butler's examination, censorship and approval; then why not also the mails? Are letters to be deemed sacred? While we write we feel no assurance that to the infamy already known, this baseness, so hostile to the spirit of our people, has not been added.

It is impossible not to recognize in the proceedings thus far the footprints of one whose rule in New Orleans has gained him a bad reputation wherever men are taught to abhor what is vile, cruel and mean—

Are we to have the practices of one who was repudiated by all men of genuine courage, revived and made a permanent feature in the government of the country?

Are we to have the espionage upon ladies, and dastardly references to them in the public press, followed up by a fresh Order No.

49, emanating with the alteration of the managers, and asserted in "the name of all the people"? Let us know; for the time speedily comes when the people, whose authority is thus forged and whose liberties are thus outraged, will apply a sure and certain remedy! Is this New Orleans of 1863, and is Butler in command.—National Intelligencer.

WADE'S VOTE FOR HIMSELF.

Of a considerable portion of the Republican press, even including some journals which have sought public opinion, a proper means of influence upon the Court of Impeachment, it is but just to say that they stigmatize in fitting terms the indecency of Senator Wade's vote, being a judge, to make himself President.

The Constitution of the United States, in one case exactly similar to his, and the statutes of every State in the Union, expressly exclude from the judgments seat the Judge who, by having a personal interest in the result of his decision, may possibly be biased to injustice towards any suitor.—The slight and feeble interest which a judge might have in his law partner's winning a sixpenny suit is not enough to prohibit his sitting on the bench; and so on through the higher grades of interest and possible bias. It is not sufficient that this bias would in the majority of cases be counteracted by the dividing mind of a just judge. It is sufficient that the bias might survive in the mind of the most honest, and would be a bribe to a dishonest, judge.

Senator Wade, sitting as a Judge in the Court of Impeachment, even if well intentioned, could give no sufficient security to the respondent, to the Court, to himself, that his mind should be discharged of the great bias arising from his interest in the result. Than the Presidency with its wide powers and its exalted station there could be no more effectual bribe to the mind of a Judge not perfectly upright.

Senator Wade accepted the bribe, voted in his own interest, and made his political career in the contempt and indignation of all just men.—N. Y. World.
