The Daily Sentinel.

VOL. III. RALEIGH, N. C., FRIDAY, JUNE 12, 1868. NO. 262.

DAILY SENTINEL.

WM. E. PELL, Proprietor.

From the Richmond Whig.

BUT FOR THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Mr. Colfax, the light-weight on the Republican side of the national prize ring, assures us, in his letter of acceptance, that "the past record of the Republican party cannot be blotted out or forgotten." This is more's the pity. "If there had been no Republican party," he continues, "slavery would to-day cast its baleful shadow over the Republic." In which case there would have been four millions of the happiest human beings on earth, instead of a helpless and miserable horde to be preyed upon by vice, disease and want; to grow less in numbers, lower in character, worse off in condition, ruinous and to-day, until extinction has relieved us of their presence and their offences. "If there had been no Republican party a free press and free speech would be as unknown from the Potomac to the Rio Grande as enter years ago." If the taunt could be arrested at it would show that the freedom of the press has been invaded by violence ten times as often North of the Potomac as it ever was South of it. "If the Republican party could have been stricken from existence when the banner of rebellion was unfurled, and when the response of no coercion was heard at the North, we would have had no nation to-day." If the Republican party had never had an existence, "the banner of rebellion," would never have been unfurled. "But for the Republican party," and so on, and so on.

If Mr. Colfax had not had his head turned by the nomination he received, he would have avoided a style of composition so apt to invite imitation, or rather continuation, by those who reflect more thoughtfully than he what might have been, or not have been, but for the Republican party. If there had been no Republican party, the bloodiest, cruelest and most unnatural war of modern times would have been escaped; there would not have been half a million of graves filled by brave young men who had little or nothing to do with bringing on war; there would not have been the anxiety, suffering and desolation that in some form or other entered almost every household in the land; there would not be thousands of families reduced from affluence to want; there would not be a national debt so enormous and crushing in its proportions that the only escape from it is in the national disgrace of repudiation; there would not be a Constitution that was the admiration of the world trampled into the mire and so utterly debauched and befouled as to be of no possible use in the future; there would not be the finest system of government invented, and the most hopeful experiment of self-government ever tried, destroyed in principle and theory, and keeping up for a while longer only sham pretences and mocking forms.

Even in spite of the war there might have been much that was valuable saved from the wreck, but for the Republican party. Everything was in their hands. The ability to restore the Union, preserve the States, re-establish civil authority, curtail expenditures, exact honesty in public officers, revive the sources of business, accrue the unfortunate and secure general prosperity, was in Congress, where the Radical party held more than two-thirds of its members subject to its bidding. And what is the result? The Union unrestored, States dethroned, the country distracted—military dictation controlling one-third of it—expenses undiminished—enormous taxation weighing down industry—usurpation by one branch of Government over the other branches, and a bold attempt made to convert the very genius of Republican Institutions into a Congressional despotism that defies the restraints of the fundamental law of the land and tramples upon the rights of the citizen guarded by its provisions.

But it is useless to continue the subject. What we have said has been merely suggestive. If one would know what we owe to the Republican party, he has only to compare what we are with what we were. Si monumentum quaris, circumspice!

From the Chicago Times.

Governor Baker, of Indiana, made a speech at the decoration of soldiers' graves in Indianapolis, last Saturday, commencing as follows:

"The humanizing influence of our modern Christian civilization is marked by the increased interest taken by the living in the last resting places of the departed.

"Moved by this influence, we stand to-day in one of the loveliest, quiet cities of the dead, and in a ward of that city which is consecrated as the burial-place of brave and true men who died in the military service of their and our country.

"We come to these graves with spring's first floral offerings and with wreaths of evergreens, not because such tributes of grateful appreciation and pious affection can benefit the sacred dead who here sleep, but because we would keep alive in our hearts and in the hearts of those who shall come after us a proper love of their virtues and patriotism, and of the cause for which they died."

As an example of what Indiana Governor can do in the rhetoric line this is not bad. But considered in the light of historical accuracy, it is unreliable.

It was the "humanizing influence of our modern Christian civilization" which moved his excellency and his [illegible] to strew soldiers' graves with "spring's first floral offerings," would it have been an unchristian act to have stated how that humanizing influence was brought to bear upon them?

The practice of decorating the graves of soldiers with "spring's first floral offerings" was first inaugurated by those unchristian, semi-barbarous, and altogether inhumane wretches, the "red-handed rebels." So shocked was the Northern sense of loyalty thereat, that a military edict was promulgated to suppress this manifestation of interest in the resting-places of the departed. It may not have been that the military satraps were moved thereto by "the humanizing influence of our modern Christian civilization"; nevertheless, the fact has become history; and it is only proper that historic truth should be recognized at all times. The fact simply is, that a very appropriate practice, which took its origin Southern rebels, and which was suppressed, when first discovered, as an indication of a "rebellious spirit," was afterwards introduced, and has since been imitated, in the North. A decent regard for truth would hardly endeavor to conceal this fact by ascribing the origin of the practice in Indiana to the "humanizing influence of our modern Christian civilization."

THE SOUTHERN VOTE FOR PRESIDENT.—Speaking of the design of the Radicals to elect a President by aid of the Freedmen's Bureau, the National Intelligencer says:

"But it is as well that these desperate demagogues should know that the American people will not tamely submit to be defrauded of their rights, or to be cheated out of the election of President by fabricated negro votes, as was recently done in Ohio city, whether it suits the convenience of General Grant or not."

The same paper, referring to a covert suggestion that the Democratic National Convention might recommend "impartial suffrage," says:

"Under whatever specious forms of language this heresy (negro suffrage) may be wrapped up, it is none the less impertinent and offensive to the honest convictions of the Conservative masses of the country.—The votes of Ohio and Michigan, repudiating negro suffrage altogether by forty thousand majority each, form the key-note to the real feelings and convictions of the people, which politicians will only tamper with at their peril."

THIS GREAT WORK PRESENTS THE ONLY complete and impartial analysis of the causes of the War yet published, and gives those interior lights and shadows of the great conflict only known to those high officers who watched the flood-tide of revolution from its fountain springs, and which were so accessible to Mr. Stephens, from his position as second officer of the Confederacy.

To a public that has been surfeited with APPARENTLY SIMILAR PRODUCTIONS, we promise a change of fare both agreeable and salutary, and an intellectual treat of the highest order.
