THE RADICAL CIVIL WAR—ARMING THE NEGROES IN THE SOUTH.

We invite the careful attention of all thinking men to the following extracts from Mr. Doolittle's speech, in opposition to the Radical scheme for arming the negroes and inaugurating war:

"I regret exceedingly that anything should be done by Congress or by anybody which would tend to bring about a war of races in the Southern States. That there is great danger that such war may arise, is certain. No man can look upon the state of things at the South and not feel the danger. There are some of the States of the South where not only all the men who have held any office under the State or under the Federal Government are disfranchised, but where, by the oaths which are required to be taken in the Constitutions of these reconstructed governments, three fourths of all the white people in these reconstructed States are disfranchised. Take the State of Alabama; the oath in the Constitution requires a man to swear that he believes and accepts the political equality of whites and blacks. In Arkansas it is the same. Now, I say to the honorable Senator from Indiana, [Mr. Morton,] that a large majority of the white people of Indiana would be disfranchised if they went into either of those States to live, and so would a large majority of the people of New York, and of all the States, with the exception of one or two, where they have ever been called upon to vote on that question. This must be the result, unless you intend that the people shall be demoralized, and shall perjure themselves, and shall take oaths which they cannot take before God without taking perjury upon their souls.

* * * * * * *

When the rebels surrendered, their arms were surrendered, for by the condition of Johnston's surrender to Sherman the arms were to be brought forward to the State arsenals and there delivered into the custody of the United States; and I have no knowledge about the other party being armed at all. There are no more arms that I am aware of on one side than the other. But what I protest is that the most dangerous of all things you can do is to put these arms into the hands of one party in the midst of an excited election and suppose that that is the way to keep the peace. * * * But you arm one party, and what is the necessary effect? Is it not of itself one of the greatest provocations that can be conceived to arm one party—a great provocation of the other to be drawn into a conflict? These people are liable to abuse their power, to drive men from the polls who claim that they have the right to vote under the laws that are established. If they attempt to go to vote they are driven away, perhaps. In the excitement of the moment a collision occurs; and if the war begins, God only knows what may be the end. * * * The Senator from Kentucky alluded to one occurrence which has taken place in the State of Georgia. A Mr. Ashburn was murdered—murdered, I believe, in a house of ill-fame; a negro brothel in the city of Columbus.

Mr. Wilson. Oh, no.

Mr. Doolittle. I state to my honorable friend from Massachusetts that he is mistaken. Such was the fact stated to me by a gentleman who resides in the town. He knows the place where this murder occurred.

Mr. Davis. It is the fact, and I know it. Men who live in Columbus, and who have been here.

Mr. Doolittle. On his being murdered a reward was offered of $40,000 for the purpose of discovering the murderers; and to show you, sir, what kind of a system of oppression can grow up where the common law is laid aside and a feature military despotism is substituted in its place, I would refer you to certain facts that have occurred there. In that city of Columbus, a man, when he left his home at breakfast, did not know whether he would return to his home again or not. Times and again men in that city were arrested without warrant, without any charge, taken to Atlanta, thrust into dungeons ten feet square, ten feet long and two and a half or three feet wide, with no light and no air except what came through the grates at the top. Men lay in those dungeons for a whole week without being permitted to speak to a human being, and at the end of the week taken out and before detectives told, "Now, sir, tell us what you know about the murder of Ashburn. Forty thousand dollars reward has been offered to detect and to find out who were the murderers. If you disclose the fact you may participate in the reward."—"Sir," said two or three of these gentlemen and their names were given to me by the person who made the statement, "I know nothing of the murder of Ashburn." "Yes you do, sir;" and thereupon they were thrust back into the cells again for another week.

One of these men, a young man residing in the city of Columbus, who was a man of temperate habits, quite fleshy, weighing two hundred pounds, was in the habit, whatever placed in one of these cells, and when his counsel, Mr. Crawford, of Georgia, formerly a member of the House, whom the honorable Senator from Massachusetts must well know, called upon him, he found him stripped because the weather was hot, and the reason was asked why he did this. Said he, "To receive one pitcher of water in the morning; that water I pour over my floor, with the exception of just enough to quench my thirst, and I take off all my clothing, down to my undershirt, and lie upon the floor where the wet and damp and put my face down at a crack between the floor, where I can catch a particle of fresh air." There he was kept suffering for a whole week, and then taken out again by these detectives and inquired of what he knew of the murder of Ashburn?

I hold in my hand an affidavit made by a colored man, who was also prosecuted in the same way, in order, by this system of torment and persecution, to wring from him, if possible, something, some story some tale in relation to the murder of Ashburn. He states in fact that he was arrested and taken from his train which he was driving through the streets, that he was hurried off from one place to another, and finally to Fort Pulaski, that in Fort Pulaski, after he had been placed in a dungeon for a while, he was placed in that instrument of torture, which is denominated a sweat box, and kept standing in it for thirty-seven hours, when he was taken out and again asked, "What do you know of the murder of Ashburn?" These detectives, acting, not under the common law which gives us our liberty and secures our rights, but acting under the military despotism which grows out of this system, have in Georgia, in our own country, under the authority of the reconstruction laws of Congress, or rather by an abuse of the power which that authority has given, subjected persons to a prosecution equal in the box, equal to the thumb-screw, in order to force from them some confession of their knowledge of the murder of Ashburn. This colored man, after being blindfolded, was taken from his dungeon and led round and round until he was bewildered and lost, and was brought up at last in front of a loaded cannon, with a man ready to pull the string and fire it, and threatened that it should be fired upon him if he did not disclose something about the murder of Ashburn."

CARPET-BAGGERS IN THE SOUTH.

[From the New Orleans Times, July 17.]

Some of the stories that are told by carpet-baggers and saddle-baggers at each other's expense are more amusing than any from any other source. A tour on horseback was recently made by two of them through the State, and the following is the story told by one of his partners:

"The first time I noticed anything wrong about him we went into a country store where a crowd was sitting around and looking at us hard. I called for liquor, and while the bar keeper's back was turned H—— reached over in a cigar box and commenced to help himself. I caught him by the hand and gave him a look. When we got away, I said to him:

"'You infernal fool, what did you want to go for that fellow's cigar for? I intended to give you half, but d—n it, couldn't you see those fellows sitting around, and who would have cut your throat if they had so much as seen you bat your eyes at them?' It was sometime before I fully got over that.

"We traveled on another day, and at every house we came to my partner would carry his arm stiff, and tell people he had been wounded in the Confederate army.

"We stopped all night at Bill ——'s, who has killed a half dozen people in duels, but who treated us well. About all he had left was a pair of dueling pistols, and one of these I discovered, when we got on the road the next day, that my partner had brought off. I felt like taking it and blowing the top of his head off. He promised, however, after I had nearly cursed myself. Boasts to do better. But that very night we stopped at another house, where an ex-planter treated us like fighting cocks, and I thought that my partner would have the decency to keep quiet, and there were some ladies at the table, and I did not care to make a bad impression upon them.

"But the next morning as we galloped off, I noticed that my saddle-bags had wonderfully bulged out, and kept a flapping about my legs in a queer sort of way.

"Why, what in the deuce is the matter with the d—d things?' I said to a nigger boy that was with me. 'It seems as if I was riding on a bag of corn.'

"'H— has put something there,' said the nigger in a whisper, 'but his is fuller than yours.'

"And it was true. He had stolen several carats of perique tobacco, and placed some of them in my saddle bags. He put in his own saddle-bags, among other things, a pair of the old man's pants, which he used as drawers, after cutting off some of the legs. When he rode up I said to him:

"'You d—d infernal thief, what do you mean?'

"Why, said he, 'you don't call it stealing to take anything from these rebels?'

A good many subsequent adventures followed in the same style, but we have not space to quote farther.

Grocery and Commission Business!

THE UNDERSIGNED CONTINUES to carry on, at the old place of business, on Hargett street, the Grocery and Commission Business in its various branches.

He will always keep on hand everything usually found in a FIRST-CLASS Family Grocery establishment. There is no necessity for particularizing.

The stringency of the times compels him to adopt, strictly,

THE CASH SYSTEM.

Do not, therefore, send orders or notes, or make application for credit.

He will pay prompt attention to, and make regular returns of, Consignments. CONSIGNMENTS to be sold on COMMISSION, are solicited.
